"Well, I do see some merit in the Cala system. Their method of replacing leaders does show their Saracen origins, being similar to that of the Kharijites. But, I ultimately think that threatening Calas with defenestration as an end to their term and not allowing them to resign peacefully could cause issues.

Now, for Vermuth Iron Tiger himself. Meritocracy is honestly just a buzzword, as 'merit' could mean a variety of things. That and most meritocratic systems ultimately succumb to nepotism at some point. I mean, look at how universities developed in America in the 21st century.

A pragmatic foreign policy is good, though I don't know what expansion entails for a tribal society. I also don't know how mercantilism would apply to a tribal society, even if it was advanced. Self-improvement isn't even an actual political position, though honestly it rubs me the wrong way. The last time I attempted 'self-improvement', I got beaten up by a gang of jocks.

I do appreciate his stances against religious fundamentalism and conservatism. I've seen how it crippled America, and thus I see merit with them.

I still think they shouldn't have muddled themselves up with Mongol DNA, but whatever. I guess their society reflects what they are."

Townes is certainly an accomplished individual, I'll give him that. Crossing the Rubicon to depose a government that one is not too fond of, is no easy feat. His awareness that he's taken more power than he can handle is also somewhat admirable.

State

I would say that his belligerent jingoism is far too reminiscent of the kind that plunged human civilization into an irradiated wasteland in this reality, but the wars that he is involved in don't seem to have become nuclear as of yet, and his laser program, if it's similar to the the lasers in the Lucky 38, should be able to shoot down nuclear missiles. Furthermore, his foreign policy isn't too terrible either; it seems like he at least knows some semblance of diplomacy, even if it's not always the best.

My opinion of General Townes is mostly positive, although I should still be cautious about his Ultrapatriotism ideology.

Mussolini once said it was better to live one day as a lion than living a thousand year as a sheep. But for Galeazzo, he took the easy way out and decided to don sheep clothing as a wolf of fascism. It was another ordinary day when Galeazzo had to attend a Nuovo Ordine meeting. His mind zoned out as he ran calculations in his mind while only being able to pick up talking points from a radical fascist fellow about "Jewish conspiracies" and "killing the bourgeois traitors". However he immediately collected himself and took the stage as he prepared a speech on the podium. Adjusting his glasses and stating with a stoneface "perhaps we should tone down on the anti-semitism and rhetoric" as his Amicus raised their eyebrows.

"Matthew Smith, you are the same-old same-old politicians who have ruled a liberal democracy. Playing it safe and trying to come across as the sane-headed man in a room filled with political radicals from both sides. Yet your rise to power is nothing but admirable and perhaps so lucky... as if the divine hand of God has personally intervened to make sure that life goes well for your career. Politics is opaque and for a grunt-turned-young politician like you to become PM one day is perhaps all too convenient. As if the establishments of your own party has pulled strings to get you in. While I have to deal with fucking radicals in my own party who want to massacre Jews and the rich; you have your bandmates to worry about."

Like a leech you can feast on someone till your hunger and get bigger while the host gets smaller, until death finally takes the host and of course you find a new one, it reminds me of so many stories, so many people. But i may be wrong, I've been wrong before as people just like to look stylish while running things and I can't really blame them, it strikes fear in the lower classes.

"Valsin seems to be a normal liberal politician, supporting the cosmopolitan world order. There is one exception, which is his support for better labor laws for the working man. I admittedly am surprised that a free market capitalist would support such things.

Honestly, his stance on race seems to be due to the fact that the only races in his world seem to be the European and Middle-Eastern races. Perhaps, if his world had a version of Africa, then he'd understand the importance of deterring the negroid menace. Then again, perhaps not. Regardless, I don't see the issue with non-racialism in a world where racial diversity is significantly less. Or maybe, I'm wrong.

I oppose his liberalism and support for constitutional monarchy, of course. But honestly, the same can be said of many leaders. I don't have a personal issue with him. Perhaps, his definition of socialism differs from mine, depending on what the USRJ is actually like."

At least that's one thing you've got good taste in."

-It's not quite Diplomat's speech, but it'll do.

"She does remind me of that khan of the steppes that once troubled my empire. Hopefully, unlike him, she knows that when a goddess offers to forgive them for attacking her people that it is wise to accept lest their people face destruction mere weeks later. Though her five points are quite agreeable, there is one that is just not in anyway correct. Only a way of life chosen by a divine is the proper way of life as we are so much more knowledgeable than mere mortals. I can only assume this is because of ignorance of the way of life of my people chosen by me as I do not see anyway any reasonable being could not look at that and agree that that the best way of life."

Zravvisk is the name of our species, but other people commonly call us "Space Dragons".

Don't meddle in the affairs of dragons for you are crunchy and tolerable with condiments.

A day in the Armada isn't too different from a Star Trek episode if almost everyone in the Federation was a dragon and spiritual.

Trying to collect every NS pokemon card. Almost 630 collected.

"Imagine calling yourself a based reactionary and supporting those r*inbow degenerates. Or supporting gender eq*ality. Both of those never existed and to think otherwise is crimethink. It doesn't really matter though, since virtually every leader is too anarchist/progressive in my off-compass totalitarian eyes. But what is particularly cringeworthy about this figure is that she is supposedly a goddess. Heresy, pure heresy. The only divine entity is me, the glorious leader, and to even contemplate thinking otherwise is worthy of disappearance. She does like conquest and militarism and hates nonbelievers, but she is just too moderate and is obviously misguided from the path of the ogre. Her being a dragon doesn't help, as I personally know a far superior dragon, one who singlehandedly killed that one crazy midget with the oversized tower. But anyways, go on with your political realism. Just know that Ultra-Orwellian Nazbol is the only way to salvation."

"I would appreciate it that this false deity remain silent... Not a single soul in the 'crew' she stays within appears to take her claim seriously anyway. I could care less what she thinks she can do or what values she holds -- I stand my ground that anything outside the Seven Cults of Chronoros be damned."

Arpent de Nieve (Monegasque Republic)

Setting: 1926 (PT/FanT)

After the Monaco Succession Crisis of 1918 ended up with the Grimaldi being exiled from Monaco and the microstate being taken over by pro-French politicians, lobbyists, businessmen, Sicilian mafia and odd string of cultists, the little country on Cote d'Azur now becomes hotbed of excesses and degeneracies that rivals Weimar Republic. Now a gambling table for the struggle of power between multiple factions, in a state where money equals power and vice versa - both in this life and the next. Major influence here.
