I mean, we can actually create a mathematical definition for evolution in terms of the evolutionary algorithm and then write code to deal with abstract instances of evolution, which basically equates to mathematical proof that evolution works. All that remains is to show that biological systems replicate in such a way as to satisfy the minimal criteria required for evolution to apply to them, something which has already been adequately shown time and again. At this point, we've pretty much proven that not only can evolution happen, it pretty much must happen since it's basically impossible to prevent it from happening.

I'm listening to Area. It's an interesting Italian Progressive rock band.
The singer was a genius.

Two Fingers-Two Fingers

Instrumental version of their first album, which featured a lot of singers. Mostly hip-hop stuff I think. Prefer it in instrumental form. And I think a lot of people actually preferred them staying instrumental instead of adding vocalists. Good to see people appreciate instrumental stuff.

Two Fingers-Subway Rhythm

Not as good as their 2nd album (Or more like 3rd, since Instrumentals was their 2nd), but still has good aspects. People seem to rate this one the highest though (Instrumentals album rated higher than the original with vocals), but eh, I prefer the newer one.

Jon Hopkins-Elegiac

Don't think I liked the older albums as much as the newer one from last year. There was an 8 year gap between this album and his next I think (Though he did other stuff between), then 4 after that. Also has decent soundtracks. All quite different from each other...
