I mean, we can actually create a mathematical definition for evolution in terms of the evolutionary algorithm and then write code to deal with abstract instances of evolution, which basically equates to mathematical proof that evolution works. All that remains is to show that biological systems replicate in such a way as to satisfy the minimal criteria required for evolution to apply to them, something which has already been adequately shown time and again. At this point, we've pretty much proven that not only can evolution happen, it pretty much must happen since it's basically impossible to prevent it from happening.

known this band for years. I get the feeling my dad is a huge part of why I love such a variety of music like I do today. He helped me grow up on a variety of different types of music which has helped me have such an open mind with music today, and in general I think it has helped me have an open mind to everything.

As far as symphonic metal goes, from what I have heard, I definitely think they are the best in that realm.

I know this one and 6000 Years of Darkness pretty well from hearing them in my dads room. Hearing this one I can't even see it as the same band ☐

They are symphonic power metal so you can't say they are the best in symphonic metal. ☐ Unless you actually are saying Kamelot is the best in all symphonic metal.

I don't know what genre this is but I like it.

Another album I grew up on. I remember loving a song from it about 12 years ago, and I'm only 18.
