We are socialists, as our government cares about its citizen, offering free healthcare and helping citizens in need.

"We can proudly announce that we no longer have people of Tranatan descent in our borders."

They seem to be rather proud to have completely removed a people group from their borders, it's concerning to say the least, and is something that our Stateholder strongly disagrees with. This, however, also points to the blood soaked history their nation seems to have been born from. There also seems to be a strong amount of patriotism given to the military, and some form of reverence for a Generalfeldmarschall Kraftz.

All in all, I wish there was more to dig into, but as far as we can tell, they stand as a nationalistic state that doesn't shy away from being seen as such.

Correct me if I'm wrong, but Frievolk's military has the rather unique directive of protecting "property, life, and safety of Frievolkers". I'd assume such a function leads me to believe that the military also acts as a federal police force domestically and abroad for Frievolkers.

They claim to be benevolent through their internal organization and management, but we all know subsidization without dictation is easily embezzled, so I doubt they actually can abolish poverty.

Surprisingly, there is no private transportation in the Pan-Asiatic States. In conjunction with my previous statement, nearly everything and anyone is state-sanctioned and controlled. The government is everywhere.

That the horse is their national animal, and that the meat of any equine animal can be sold to the public for purposes of food.

Edit: The national animal of the previous regime was the horse, but currently, meat of equine animals is widely available for food.
