Yeah. By far. But a lot of times the genres people put works, except sometimes you can tell because the band isn't that huge nobody puts a lot of effort into being very specific on the genre.

Sigur Rós-Kveikur

I love Sigur Ros' live visuals. And this video reminds me of how cool their live visuals are, and that if you have epilepsy you shouldn't watch this video.

Also, another favorite from the album.

A few times on wikipedia the genres listed made me go "o :s that can't be right."

Sigur Rós-Rafstraumur

This song is definitely different then their typical songs. In the sense that I feel like it is closer to a completely different style of post-rock music. Which isn't technically a bad thing. Their music has always changed up the post-rock feel and generally sounded like post-rock, but parts of it so remind me of a completely different post-rock song style that is completely out of their typical realm, which to me has always felt way different then any other post-rock stuff.

Huh, this ones the same way, really. Not that Sigur Ros hasn't had that style of post-rock guitar sounds before, but I don't remember it being so prominent in some songs. I mean, a song even comes to mind that has used it before, but still.

Yes, I'm just blabbering.

I'm currently listening to.....nothing at all because I'm pondering what I'm doing next.

Back to some weird avant-garde bands with weird names.

Orange Tulip Conspiracy-The Bourbon Theater

Some strange jazz music and carnival music..... Sounds rather old styled.

I notice avant-garde bands seem to like having jazz influence in their music.

Nothing wrong with Nekrogoblikon, if you ask me. The frustrated and the religious probably disagree, but those wankers can't be helped.

I mean, we can actually create a mathematical definition for evolution in terms of the evolutionary algorithm and then write code to deal with abstract instances of evolution, which basically equates to mathematical proof that evolution works. All that remains is to show that biological systems replicate in such a way as to satisfy the minimal criteria required for evolution to apply to them, something which has already been adequately shown time and again. At this point, we've pretty much proven that not only can evolution happen, it pretty much must happen since it's basically impossible to prevent it from happening.
