Our world is negative enough as it is, so I really appreciate the more positive nations. We're not on this site for realism, after all.

I mean some people are, and I have been in the past tbh. I also like semi-realism in most of my nations since it is basically just an excuse to include suffering and pointless epic violence.

Have you considered violence for a reason?

Yeah but this is the nation for omniscidal war that kills billions in the faint hope of achieving victory over some opponent. This nation is just an excuse to reenact Starsector saturation bombing, The Tintavel Massacre, and Stellaris planet murder all neatly wrapped into one dystopian post-apocalypse IN SPACE!!!

I actually am building up the backstory of Comerciante's WW3 as being a conflict to rule over the ashes of civilization that only stopped because one side finally gave into the internal bleeding... and the other side only technically won because it was just surviving thanks to literal necromancy.

Here's a cliché. Dictatorships that do not have functioning political cliques, factions, and interest groups to manage and simply do whatever draconian nonsense they want without fear of the consequences. Every essential key to power is owned by a hyper-competent sycophant with no personal ambitions and no loyalties to anyone aside from the dictator. The populace doesn't even try to resist covertly. And realism dwells in a shallow grave.

To be fair, those kinds of dictatorships are usually just Strawman: The Dictatorship.

Any nuance is lost because they're usually "ideology bad!" or the personal fantasies of wanna-be dictators.

What about an absolutist dictatorship on paper which in practice is more of an oligarchic aristocracy? 🤔

It's a bit of a bummer, really. 1984 arguably has factional divisions, but we don't get to see them largely because Winston is a mid-tier bureaucrat crushed under the bullying bulk of a totalitarian state. We do see some hints though, such as the acknowledged shift in foreign policy "we've always been at war with Eastasia" and Goldstein. It's still a caricature of Stalin's Russia, but it's not altogether flat.

I've always maintained that we need more flawed societies based upon one's own views; i.e., like you've [kinda] [almost] done with Big Sky, I see :p

South Reinkalistan is a massive, ecologically-diverse nation notable for its roving student militias and widespread hatred for the elderly. In the midst of a room-temperature cultural revolution that's lost its momentum, the Party carefully plans its next move. As the brittle bones of fragile empires begin to crack beneath their own weight, history's symphony reaches crescendo pitch. The future is all but certain.

Hear, hear! I think it is that sentiment that lies behind the way I write Baizou.

Not to knock our grimmer compatriots, of course! Such nations can be fun in their own way as well. But it's not a tone I can personally bring myself to produce. ^^;

My most lighthearted puppet involves gunboat diplomacy against the USA, stealing cattle, destroying crops and institutionalized sexual assault genetic sampling as daily life.

But hey, it's funny when cute little cinnamon rolls from Outer Space do it.

Hey hey, LP here: Too burnt out with this nation to make new lore or fix macrohistorical longue durée alt-his inconsistencies, too clingy to let it die.

I don't really know about that, mini-community threads seem to be few and far between from what I have seen. But maybe that's just because I haven't really explored nationstates to its fullest as of yet.

To be fair, most of the people here who have formed a sort of "community" are already all acquainted with each other, and most of them are Effortposters™ anyways.
