"Oh dear heavens above, are you truly the same creature Ambrosia was infatuated with a long time ago? My poor child's standards seem to have slipped but I do thank you for marrying behind her back. I don't have to suffer watching you desecrate her any more. No offense intended. A goddess must always be honest.

However, it would be rather shallow of me to judge you solely by your looks! Unlike my dear Ambrosia, you have the courage to seize anything that you want! Whether it be bread and beer or an entire solar system! If only you could teach Ambrosia how to unleash her own power, she'd have been battling the heavens for control right about now. No deity would stand in her path, not even I.

Now then...onto your little pet. The Draksesan! Yes! It must be reassuring for you to have such a powerful tool at your disposal. I definitely do not wish to burst her bubble but has she ever asked herself why she pursues the path of enforcing so called 'Order' across the universe? Does she truly believe that anything that is remotely chaotic is out to unravel the universe?

If that is the case, any attempts at breaking down an authority would, by definition, bolster 'Chaos'. Would you uphold a cruel institution for the sake of 'Order' then? Would you oppose cruel gods and goddesses that maintain 'Order' in their realms?

Child, there is nothing more infuriating than to see a lower being such as yourself believe that you have life figured out. If you have strayed true to your path for so long, you are nothing but a pawn. Do you believe that the Chaos Gods weaken when you spill the blood of their minions across the multiverse? Khorne cares not from where the blood flows, only that it flows without cease for all eternity. How long have you spilled the blood of your enemies, my dear?" - Isis, Nehekhara Goddess of Magic

Regarding Sarathress

" Not my first time meeting ascendants and i hope that not the last, I have observed a pattern with ascendants during my travels trough existence, it seems that when a race gets to the point where they can no longer be opposed they always become either imperialists or isolationists, as i see the AnKazar choose both options, i send my regards to Sarathress and i admit this has been an interesting part of the journey"
