They are independent Quebec, formed in the aftermath of a nuclear (fallout shelters are mentioned?) war, and are well on their way to recovery since they've got a 7.5 trillion dollar economy.

One notable former Marine of the Infinite Empire is Torchwood Director John Forge. Forge served within the Marines for roughly fifty years, before and through the Rebellion, rising to the rank of captain, however refusing any promotion as a result of he needed to stay fighting instead of be guilty of coordination. Only if Nathan Koenig approached him and offered him command of Torchwood did he yield, tho he can still mirthfully have interaction in combat at any chance at presents itself, usually enterprising missions himself instead of letting different Agents do therefore.

AN is a moderately sized nation with a very religious populace and a mixed economy. The political landscape is dominated by the right-wing and the legislature has a lot of checks and balances on itself.

This is very well-written, like the entire thing sort of flows.

For a long period of time, the virtually unregulated advertising industry used aggressively widespread marketing strategies that caused a great deal of confusion and annoyance with consumers, while simultaneously obstructing legitimate television and radio programs. Advertisement Segregation Act of 1968, in short, instituted print and broadcast standards that would ensure reasonable media-consumer relations along with measures to establish greater accountability for advertising providers.

Such standards and regulations have resulted in bans on outdoor audio ads, heavily restricted leaflet distribution, and broadcast advertising being restricted to the times between regularly scheduled programming.

Man, this is pretty extreme, but given how out of hand things became, it seems very reasonable.

"Somewhere far away, in the distant dunes that rest silhouetted far beyond the ethereal horizons of good and evil, Convallaria has emerged as a technocratic dreamscape of shimmering ambitions and passionate indulgence. A pioneering realm of unbridled industrial sprawl and paranoid black-market underworlds centered around three things: champagne, wealth, and vigorous McCarthyism..."

The US willingly balkanised into separate nationstates in 2038. The US-proper lost nearly half of the states, and California, Mexico, and Jefferson (Cascadia?) now rule the West. Kentucky and Missouri both undergone their own changes based on cultural borders, and of course, the CSA is there, too.

The very title of their history factbook summarises it pretty well: "What if the East ruled instead of the West?" Particularly, the way Islam dominates much of the world got my interest. I haven't read all of it yet, but from my brief skims in a couple of the sections, it seems there are sultanates in just about every corner of the world: from Morocco to the Philippines. There also seems to be some talk of Arabia industrialising, and I'll make sure to keep looking through these pages to find out more this fascinating AU.

(I have to say, this is a very good retcon, PAS.)

Since 2010s, the historically decentralized Shtetan media had experienced some sort of re-centralization, with the most prominent outlets uniting into three media groups, referred to as 'alliances.'

1. The Socialist Network, originating from the pro-Soviet propaganda, supports The Bund and other leftist parties;
2. The Shabbos Alliance was designed as a rival to the TSN and focuses more on Orthodox Jewish matters.
3. The Prometheus Project, the smallest of the three groups, tries to maintain the image of non-partisanship and objectiveness, yet they tend to support centrist parties.
