Tortoise-Swung from the Gutters

Aaand it looks like the most highly praised Tortoise albums will probably end up being my least favorites.

Tortoise-The Equator

Okay, it got a bit more interesting. They're like a jazz-infused post-rock band that reminds me of Pele in a sense, but waaaaayyyy more interesting and came before Pele, so Pele would be more like a boring ass clone.

Tortoise-Almost Always is Nearly Enough

Even though it still has interesting moments, not as impressed with this as their later stuff still. 7/10.

Pelican-An Inch Above Sand

Wow, it is interesting how things I enjoyed when I was first getting into sludge metal and post-rock now feel so...bleh. Now that I've found better sludge metal stuff, including instrumental sludge metal (Because post-rock mixed with metal is technically sludge metal, even though they have a term post-metal now), like Russian Circles, Isis, and Neurosis, this kinda stuff just feels rather boring...

This songs probably the best though, even if I only really listen to it for one part...
