Either life in prison or capital punishment, depending on the state it happens and whether it can be considered a federal crime.

Building a manufacturing line in a shed in your own backyard where you produce small arms, explosives and ammunition. Note that the weaponry is not being sold (either publicly or in black market) and the manufactory is not licensed if such a concept exists in YN.

For the most part, such acts are none of our concern. In some contexts, where such acts are intended as an act of direct defiance or insubordination, re-education is ordered. The amount of re-education required is largely dependent on the merit points of the plaintiff, defendant, and if--and how much the status quo has been undermined.

All parties involved in executing the crime will be given a life sentence in prison and will be given a 8500R fine, with a maximum penalty of capital execution via electric chair.
