The Mountain Goats - No Children

Went to see them with my daughter at a +100 year old former theater, an intimate venue, they totally rocked.

This song is their signature piece, place went bonkers. They also did the music for Moral Orel on Adult Swim...a perfect fit for that.

Tallahassee is one of the greatest albums ever created. The quote in my signature was taken from Game Shows Touch Our Lives. Whenever I'm really dealing with bout of melancholy, this album is always beyond in touch with what I feel. It's so damn good.

Have to Explode - The Mountain Goats.
Album: Tallahassee (2002).
Genre: indie folk rock.

*Staring up... up... at the hundred-watt light that burns above...
Name one thing about us two anyone could love -
We roll out the red carpet when rotten luck comes down the road.
Five, four, three, two, one, watch for the flash.
Something here will eventually have to explode...
Have to explode.*

Having resided in West Texas for six months, I can confirm it's even more depressing and nihilistic than the city of Tallahassee. Part of what makes both albums so good is their setting alone - truly desolate, God-forsaken places.

Alpha Rats Nest - The Mountain Goats.

*Sing for the flames that will rip through here
And the smoke that will carry us away*

(Probably my favorite lines on the album - there's also a line with the same gist on No Children.)
