Not considered a crime. If it's the Nazi Hakenkreuz it will be just seen as supporting an unpopular ideology, and if it's the Indo-Iranian swastika it can be seen as a symbol of nationalism. Throwing racist chants at protests?

Not really problematic, a fine usually at most, unless a more serious crime is committed, which would mean time dilation prison time in cyberspace. If the trespass happens on government property, then instantly receive time dilation prison time, and even more if on an ultra secret location. If done in accordance with espionage, then on top of the aforementioned penalties, simulated execution in cyberspace and potential real life execution.

Probably serious torture in in cyberspace and simulated execution several times followed by real execution, if committed by an outsider against the mother nation. If done by a citizen of Stella Nera to other nations, literally no penalty and we don't care what the WA says. In fact, its kind of encouraged, and those who do commit such acts are still given full honors as an other serving member of the military.

5 years and 1% of net worth fine for personal environmental damages.

Exposing employees to levels of oxygen defined as hazardous by OSHA (In this case, 19%) for long periods of time without protective gear, causing health problems and brain damage.
