I mean, we can actually create a mathematical definition for evolution in terms of the evolutionary algorithm and then write code to deal with abstract instances of evolution, which basically equates to mathematical proof that evolution works. All that remains is to show that biological systems replicate in such a way as to satisfy the minimal criteria required for evolution to apply to them, something which has already been adequately shown time and again. At this point, we've pretty much proven that not only can evolution happen, it pretty much must happen since it's basically impossible to prevent it from happening.

Yay for staying up until 4 AM

Time to go through Tomahawk's most recent album more thoroughly. From what I heard of it before it seems kind of mixed to me. One song sounded a bit...straightforward and too much like old Tomahawk. Others I quite enjoyed.

Tomahawk-Oddfellows

This being an example of one I enjoyed.

And stop with the mindless Mike Patton worship people, geez. There are other people in these bands, you know...like, people who write the music.

Now this is the one that just felt too....straightforward to me. It isn't technically bad but it doesn't really grab me. If I want old Tomahawk I'll listen to old Tomahawk. I'm not someone who wants records to sound exactly like some bands older stuff.
