It's not so much wanting people to be realistic as it is expecting more effort than "I send 200 stealth bombers to drop nukes on your capital."

Don't participate in those roleplays then.

It's really not that hard.

If someone doesn't put effort into a roleplay, just tell them that you're not going to continue participating in it.

If they don't like it, "_(ツ)_/ ", you're not obligated to play with everyone here.

Seems like this account was made to parody all the damned generic hyper-overpowered FT nations, and I bloody like it. Perhaps not so much when it kind of feels like summerposting on somebody inputting effort in their posts, though.

It was founded in June of last year, but I wanted to do the same the year prior to that. Honestly, FT stuff like that is nothing new, Godular has been around since 2004 and can be argued to have many of the same tropes and stuff that this is parodying.

I dunno, all of their posts have struck me as minimal-to-zero effort. A lot of the time, I'm not even sure if they've read the post they responded to.

Janis and Gravlov are arguing over laser diffusion. From what I can tell it's not even in an rp where they used it, they are just arguing about it's effect on laser defense period.

I think that word ends up being tossed around like candy because such instances of godmodding appears so often in the war threads. Feels more like they want to flex how awesome and cool their nation is, and because they need to get the serotonin in their brains when they ""win"" in some literal writing process, even though victory came to them through literally just tossing out ludicrous amounts of nukes, something that comes off as shitty for everyone else.

But hey, I don't read enough II RPs to be certain anyways, not like I have to participate in them.

Gravlov is convinced ICBMs are impossible to intercept, Japania meanwhile is talking about a system concept in a similar vein to a certain cold war program, then Gravlov is stumbling over bullshit. Everything from THAAD to satellite-based systems has been talked over and yet it's like talking to a brick wall.

For me personally, the inability to write a military factbook and the units used for any nation I make or may make. Especially if that nation is FT, and got to figure out the ground vehicles.

On the note of military factbooks, I care more about what the unit looks like than it's statistics, so I hate when they have no pictures, especially when the thing is supposedly powerful. At least for MT I can reasonably assume what it is.

On that note I need to add the ammo for the Cygnus guns, knowing the Service is 5.56 would probably be useful .
