From His Imperial Majesty's Personal Journal of Opinions on other Heads of States and Governments

Sitting down with his wife and sipping some sweet tea

My personal thoughts concerning 'Exarch Sera'

"I cringe when I remember my initial remarks regarding her, and I say those comments were offensive and discourteous; she did not deserve those sort of comments from me when I am not in position to judge her in such a harsh manner, and when she does have good reasons and intentions to rule that way. The Exarch Sera, though I should say I do feel a bit of discomfort because I am unfamiliar with her race, is one of the many leaders I will look up to"

"And because the world has so few good leaders and too many bad ones, I have turned to observe leaders like her, so I can change what needs to be changed in my leadership."

"Next file, what've we got? A Kaiser. Well, this'll be interesting. Made the Prince at ten, married a princess at fifteen, coronated Emperor after his grandfather's passing, alienated the empire but supported industrialization, proponent of a European economic union, helped end the Great War in an armistice, oversaw his country's rise to a great power, massive technological progress, against the military's growing power, honored the fallen from the war, passed in 1968 and left behind a Shih Tzu... Well, I'd say he was a respectable man so far. Ah, a section on his character. Pragmatic, supports industry and tradition, conservative, upholds responsibility and justice, can relate to criticism from progressives. Against the Wunderwaffe project, nicknamed 'King David', sense of humor, appreciation of art, purchases books from local bookstores, a burger guy... I can confidently say that I look up to Kaiser Oswald the First. He's earned his nickname of King David."

Both of us are car guys, you seem to be more interested in offroading while i'm more interested in tuning my Skoda Octavia to attack mountain roads, you like to fish? well so do I, pet owners? yes... until a bombshell blew up my steed.

Forgive me for pontificating a bit but we have good human rights track records, ok yours is better than mine but mine is still pretty good compared to the elephant rider or crazy tram driver. They are a vital breed that keeps a nation afloat and able to fight the wars without the embarrassment of having soldiers with empty guns. Nevertheless, Daikan is a hypocrite to seek the death of those superior to him, when he in return, has become the thing he despises the most. Although, this isn't surprising as it is typical amongst rebels that managed and rightfully defeated an incompetent government that was unable to remove the nuisance. Overall, I stand indifferent."

Nyerere's Status: Hitler mustache

“Oh? I see he is an emperor, a title used by pompous autocrats they call themselves monarchs. Heh, more like glorified dictators with a crown and arch-enemies of the proletariat, like this Ferrios Von Stein here. For all his belief in egalitarianism and being the supposed opponent of discrimination and prejudice, he likes to sit in his high castle; in his high throne where he directs the direction of his empire like a puppeteer controlling the movements of his puppets. If he is so concerned about the working class, the ones who toil to keep the empire given to him by his father, and not by the sweat of his brow, he should step down and be the man of the people. Unless, he does not want to sully himself in their presence...”
- Comrade First Secretary of the Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union of Africa, Julius Nyerere

“So, the PRC is finally becoming a proper communist country...” the User said, his words oozing with sarcasm and cynicism, watching the news on his phone about the PRC and their banning of gaming, fernboys, fandoms, and other stuff then and now.

"So, comrade First Secretary? Wait... (Pauses) 'Comrade' First Secretary? Oh this can't be good. I actually distinctly remember reading about these kinds of political 'theorists' in college, and not that I'm disputing his hard work or anything, but there's something about this fella's values that ring hollow to me. Now I have a great deal of respect for a committed leader who strives to create success for his constituents, but if my management experience has taught me anything, it's that following in the footsteps of an aggressive political commissar like Mao only succeeds in dividing the working class even more. I'm not going to lie and say I'm some angel when it comes to subversive influence, but calling in the secret police to reeducate secessionist cells - which, let's face it, we ALL know what that means - is simply stone cold, and not a trait of power that I could ever condone, even if it came between that and my job."

"The communist stuff is er, a little concerning obviously, and not just because it typically leads to curtailed freedoms, as I already mentioned. Capitalism isn't perfect, but I don't think it's deserving of the carpeted roasting that Nyerere delivered regarding the system. One of the beauties of free market competition is that the harder you work, the more incentive there is to succeed, something he seems to disagree with given his comments. But I'm living proof; and with how smart Julius genuinely is, I'm convinced he would thrive in private industry, especially given his stubborn nature. I would call it a shame, but honestly, I don't think I would ever want to work under this guy, so I'm weary about how long this support will truly last. When the time comes for his political card house to crumble, and it will, I hope he has a good Argentinian escape plan, because he's going to need it."

Yes, also remember news about those nasty puritan critics, who thought it would be hilarious to shit on her because she "went against royal dignity", all cause they were afraid of lil' bit of exposed skin. Ain't easy to be a monarch, I noticed, it's much easier to lead a semi-anarchist horde of brave warriors. I also support her commitment to the people's rights and keeping nature, after all, industry is nice, but so is the nature. And if Atkinson didn't exactly react favorably to

At least the authority of the Crown within Vacuo, or the tribes of Mistral, dare at least keep some bit of humanity within their violent killings. There's an air of familiarity around such, a conquerer of foreign lands and a savage but just ruler. Ok, so who do we have now on the leader list... Oh, its you. Its the weird pan-slavic king that somehow forced the entire population of Poland to learn a new writing style. I read that you came into power because of a civil war... How did the situation of Poland got so bad that a civil war broke out. I highly doubt that people will side with a crazy pan-slavic monarchist party, in situations like this, especially since Poland pretty dam Catholic and hasn't been a monarchy since... I don't, probably a very long time. I'm starting to suspect that a lot this is actually Lechian propaganda. And I thought that people like Zevqir and the General-Protector were crazy people. Actually now I think about it, you're like a Polish version of the Sqalmar Followers: a crazy cult led by a... ehmmwell... comparably charasmatic leader. To be honest, I don't really think that Lechia will last long after your death.

Also here is a response for wormfodder delivery because they deserve better.

So next leader... you look a little weird. I think I'm getting a bad signal because you look a little... glitchy? Its either that or your lights are broken. Either way, you are an eldritch entity? Before you ask, no thanks I don't need your wormfodder, whatever that is. Does it has something to do with actual worms? You kinda look like a worm... I think... I don't know, your picture is a bit corrupted. Do you have computer problems or something? Where do you even come from? According to your file you were found on a messageboard or something. Who actually found you and tried to interview you? No I don't want your wormfodder! Please stop trying to offer me wormfodder. I don't need it and I don't want it. Communications cut.

"Yeah, that's just awesome! Some genocidal freak preaches, who butchered innocents and oppresses the survivors says, that I am "Immoral", just because I like indulging with my lovers. As if his so called "Morals" and "Traditions" make him a saint. Dude, he doesn't even know what the heck are traditions. Traditions are a complicated aspect of culture and spirit, bonds, which are transferred from generation to generation. Not "Sex bad". Cause that doesn't define all traditions. Just a minor fraction of them. I mean, I wanna see his face, when he reads about Ancient Greece and it's orgies, ha! Now, I can have truly good relations with conservatives, I can even make concessions for these. But not with those, who commit crimes against humanity. So yes, he can cry about beaten North Korean tyrant all he wants, but in the end, I don't give a shit about what some genocidal maniac says, for this is a tenet of our ideology. To protect common man from people as this Dolboslawski."-Overboss Shawn Bjornson

"Astronomy liking dude, who worked with mafia, kills some of it's members, betrayed it and stole artifact. His life reminds me of mine. Just, adventures are slightly different. I fought the enemies of Sky Reavers as a warrior, he fought mafia as a wild card. He escaped museum on a tank, and cops too! If he was Sky Reaver, we'd have a several ballads in honor of this epic event! But... why not make a ballad of him if he is foreigner? After all, he is worthy of one! If I ever meet him, I am gonna hope to hear all his story, and tell mine, of struggles, battles, loot and glory!"-Overboss Shawn Bjomson

"Bjomson, you have no business being where you are. You're a licentious man who would fit in more with the bands of roving rapists from prehistory. You clearly have no idea how to run a state, but... I have to hand it to you, what you lack in talent you make up for in charisma; I don't even think the people around you realise how much of an ignorant fuckup you are. You can't just conquer people in the name of freedom, you ape! Do everybody a favour - stop getting drunk, stop getting into drug-fuelled sex-fests, stop playing video games, and do your fucking job."

"For someone whom speaks so much against a savage, at least the man is no tyrant. Simply putting the word Civil doesn't mean you're a champion of the people: you're a monster two steps away from your farne turning into infamy. Your plans of promotion of expansion is liable to move from underground cities to further conquest. I know myself that these... pseudo-breeding programs, aren't of any good either. You're simply waiting for the right time to use all that good faith and prosperity into a boon to what I could easily smell out as plundering for your own subterranean empire. People deserve their own freedoms, and the ones whom are burdened with the gravity of your rule should wake up to the deceit you build their homes upon."

"A god in a physical meat-bag? Fancy, huh? Westerners and their mind-body or physical-spiritual dualism; though this isn't a case of winded philosophical ramblings, it's mythology made reality! How fascinating, and scary. I wouldn't know of anything that resembles that magic stuff you go on about. Come to think of it, the skies are pretty lonely where I'm from. That can get a bit boring, and it's why my people are so into what's going on down in Earth...ehhh...buuuut...really? I guess I'm glad I don't have to worry about the presence of gods, or godhood...I wouldn't know what to do with it if I had the chance anyways; but it's great you don't abuse your power like a kid using a looking glass to destroy ants, so that's neat.

I don't wanna sound overly sentimental, Salem-han, and we hardly know each-other to begin with, but I can see some similarities between us, or our positions. We both want humanity to go on and survive, as uninterrupted as possible; for our own reasons. So, I hope you can continue to help out humans and their uh, Faunus, cousins...in the long game, I mean."
