I rather not. They have some questionable policies, that, even if they would not affect me, are indicatives of a backward and ignorant government (for example, if you are lesbian, you can only get married if you are below "5/10" in the "Dr. Stinson attractiveness scale." I mean? what? How will they rank people according to attractiveness? Isn't that too subjective a quality to be indexed? How will they enforce that? Shouldn't the government be more concerned with more important things?)

East Plate

Its a British colony in South America in the 1870s. It being british is a good reason for me to never live there and add the fact thats its in the 1870 where people died just because they left their house makes me never want to live there ever in my life.

United Eastern Vodia

Looks like a bad country to be in so i wont live there.

The Multiversal Union of Reich of the New World Order

It sure is economically developed, but actually living there is a whole other story. Lack of culture and religious freedom, along with brutal law enforcement makes it very unsafe.

The Kingdom of Nordustra

Looks like a fair cost of living, taxes for the rich, and a fair amount of focus on education, healthcare, and public transport. Also Maternity leave and vacation days?

Yeah I'm in.

Probably not, because of the low compassion and no internet policy.
