Ok so who do we have next? Zhang Zhuoyuan? So this is your entire bio. I expected more of it. But I get it, a chief executive like you is probably too busy with their hard work to have time for such silly things as establishing who you are. From the little information that you give off, I can tell that you know a lot about engineering, so I guess its something we have in common. Authoritarian-Technocrat? You're anti-democracy because you think people are too stupid to understand politics. Talk about elitism. You were also voted into power to "stabilize the country."

Sorry chief, but there is simply too little information for me to give you my opinion. What do you mean by "voted into power to stabilize the country?" Why was the country unstable? Was it because of stupid people? Is that the reason why you think stupid people shouldn't have a say? Because the only thing I can say about you, is that your bio reeks of elitism.

"It would be ever so rude of me to tell you what to do with your skills and your time in this humble multiverse, my friend. However... I can't help but worry that your skillset in... aerospace engineering, was it? Maybe the rules are different where you came from, but do your skills really translate to efficient statecraft or administration? Truth be told, my dear friend, but I can't help but feel at least a little concerned for your people..."

In fact, this is all completely disregarding the ethical questions behind letting machines hold sway over organic life. I've certainly never seen an artificial intelligence successfully run a civilisation in my time, perhaps you may be an exception to that.

...you are actually a leader, pray tell? This is all so confusing...

She is all right. I never thought I'd say that but I can live with her. She is not worth the little finger of Captain Akeno's left hand but still cool. She is willing to go to extremes for her people and she is willing to make those who stand in her way pay in blood.

Why, thank you! A leader's job is not to be overly eccentric, overly beastly or... whatever that rather scary yet rather charming Viking lady has going on. A good leader must be gentle, yet firm. Steadfast, but ever considerate. My, you seem... rather normal yourself, Dr. Akagi! ...well, comparatively, at least. [2] Heyang refers to a people of unclear ethnic origins but is theorized to refer to nomadic groups who settled adjacent to the Late Daschime Culture and later defeated in a hypothetical war. It later began to refer to foreign peoples, "savages" and "Barbarians" in Feyris language.

[3] "Fyirumeisch" is another obscure and arcane Feyris concept, but it can refer to "curse, mischief, creepiness, eeriness, evil" would unite Islam with less hardships and hassle. A rather noble goal, QUOTE especially, since his version of Islam involves gender equality. It was added by his predecessor, which is an important reform, for it greatly helps the economy by adding a large portion of population into workforce. But reform to an absolute monarchy is somewhat risky in a long term if ya' ask me. I mean, that while he does everything he can to raise the heirs to be worthy of continuing the dynasty and ruling the people... there is no guarantee, that a descendant will be good at this. Absolute monarchy is a high-risk and high-reward prospect. If monarch is a talented and benevolent ruler, who can rule efficiently without compromising his morals, then his country shall prosper and it's people will enjoy opulence. But if monarch with absolute power and little checks and balances is not too smart, or maybe he is incompetent, weak willed and easily manipulated, then the country could face dark times. Hell, even a good monarch could get sick... not badly enough to get sick days, but enough to influence his judgement. Or maybe, he could just get tired and overlook something important in one of many documents...

I am sure, that his decision to consolidate power has benevolent intention, but he should consider to add some checks and balances when he achieves the goal of unity. but that's just my concerns about long term effects of such policy.

Now, to the statement... My predecessor, Shawn Bjornson had forged and alliance with Arshanid Deccam and I see no reason to discontinue our friendship. Thus, I declare, that I shall maintain the cordial relations, based on goodwill between our states! Perhaps, we should arrange some event one day, where we could discuss various matters or just have some cultural exchange." Overboss Liam Navarro

"Laura is a young but strong soul, one who had bears many a scar from having served in her nation's military since she was a child, and not just on the surface of her skin. Being in a position of leadership, combined with extreme alcoholism and her tendency to have violent outbursts at a mere impulse themed around the enemies to her nation and other problems which plague it, make her a rather unstable person who while being admirable for having the willpower to continue on even in her worst of conditions, should be given the opportunity to deal with her own mental problems before dealing with the problems of her nation.

Plunging the world into an economic depression through cybernetic warfare fought on keyboards instead of personal strength is no way to power a nation, as it will only serve to lower the world's quality to her standard for years to come... and not only that, but actively condoning violence against foreigners and even using more lethal measures with the police only goes to prove more senselessly authoritarian rhetoric, and showcases her own unnecessary need for fear and violence in order to subjugate her people and try and eliminate any possible dissent.

...what she needs is a small break from this violent identity of hers. To step down, not permanently, but to give herself some time, perhaps a few months with a regency, in order to reflect upon herself and consider the path she chooses to take in ruling her nation, whilst also adjusting her emotions so they do not inject themselves into her rule, which is where the greatest flaws in herself and her country lie. Once the cloud of her emotional distress lifts, she will see the silliness and brutality in her actions and its' effect upon the world, and perhaps then she will change."

[1] "Shioric Script" refers to the Feyris written script, which was supposedly given by Princess Shiori in legend and myth.

[2] "Yanba" means a "settlement, town, village". This expression seems similar to "country bumpkin".

[3] "Boschiren" means "land, realm, tribe, country, nation".

[4] Heyang refers to a people of unclear ethnic origins but is theorized to refer to nomadic groups who settled adjacent to the Late Daschime Culture and later defeated in a hypothetical war. It later began to refer to foreign peoples, "savages" and "Barbarians" in Feyris language.

[5] In Daschime IV culture, a Chieftess wears a crown composed of eagle feather headdress, deer antlers, flower crown, and "Froggy Frog" ornamental beads, buttons or pins.

or to High Princess Ryeisse Schyi Yuri instead if you want to react to an MT Communist leader

"Unlike the High Princess Ryeisse Schyi Yuri, the Chieftess Ryeischbyi is an admirable figure. Brave, intelligent, and strong, she lead her people against a menace that has plagued them for a long time. She brought military reforms which resulted in the better organization of her army and attributed to her triumph over her enemy. With such a victory she not only won the war but also the heart of her people. Those envious of her rising power and influence were helpless and unable to take any steps against her due to the love and admiration of the people. Such leaders are worthy of admiration and respect, as they are leaders that can act and get things done while also receiving the love and blessings of their followers and subjects"

Waldemar Rochester

"I really do admire Sultan Arslan Bahadur for a number of reasons. For starters, as an Army General, all I could say is that I'm glad he served in the Armed Forces, even if it wasn't of his own country, that's still a very great place to start. Secondly, I am glad he acted upon the horrific prejudices that Muslims in his homeland faced, and he won a five year long war, which I commend him for. Although I do not agree with his establishing of a Constitutional monarchy, I do support the policies he has enacted, including his protection of religious minorities, his conscription, and his belief in Muslim Unity. Lastly, we share the same common political opinions. Overall, I do believe Sultan Bahadur is a great leader for his country, and I think he will lead his country to prosperity!"

"I have been advised that Supreme Leader Waldemar Rochester has been a great friend to the people and government of Tangatarehua and is of a most upstanding and decent persuasion.

"I am also informed that he is responsible for allowing his country to take great strides toward democracy and in some ways could be argued as the Crossoverian equivalent of my mother, who undertook similar measures in our own nation.

"Indeed my respect for the Supreme Leader is such that I intend in future to formally grant him an audience and convey upon him the highest honour that I can convey upon a foreigner - namely to make him a member of the Order of Rehua, First Class, in recognition of his role in cementing the friendship between the people of Tangatarehua and the people of Crossoveria."

- Empress Tamahine o te Marama, in an exceptionally rare public statement.
