Do people not know the nickname in the Americas?

ScoMo means Scott Morrison. He's been the Aussie PM since 2018.

Do you expect people in America to pay attention to foreign politics?

You can't even get people here to pay attention to local politics.

Not really sure. Whoever came up with the name likely too characteristics from Winnie to reach that conclusion, probably the "bumbling idiot" part. Though that's my best guess.

It actually originated back in 2013 when Xi made a visit to the US and people on Chinese social media started comparing a photo of him and Obama walking together with an illustration of Winnie and Tigger walking together.

What racial slur starts with an N and rhymes with Tigger?

Given the propensity of the average American internet denizen of 2013 to resort to race humour, what is the probability of that being the reason behind Obama being Tigger? (Well, that and he's taller than Xi).

I remember him because he's almost forgettable next to Mao, Deng, Jiang or Xi. And from what I've briefly read of Hua, he seems pretty unremarkable despite stopping the Gang of Four, considering his greatest feats are apparently returning things to Maoist normalcy and then getting one-upped by Deng.

un-Cliché: There really should be more NS/F7 rulers that exist to be overshadowed by bigger politicians, or whom struggle with trying to set a new legacy in their country.

This hurts especially after you type up a paragraph or two for a nation. I don't mind a brief summary, but getting hit with "they have a big military and nice factbooks" is infuriating.
