Damn, it feels like I was asleep forever and I was only asleep for like 4 to 5 hours. Stupid dreaming like the entire freaking night. But hey, dreams about fighting dragons and giant monsters smashing through our Medieval cities in this first-person MMORPG with realistic graphics was entertaining, anyway.

Everyone seems to be in love with that movie. Not really typically a fan of romance-oriented movies so I'm kind of on the fence about it. Not that I'd watch it in theaters, anyway.

Oh yeah, today is the first day of summer. Or the official start of summer, anyway.

It has actually been fairly mild here, with weird periods. We've had a couple of 80 degree days. Had that period for a few days once. And back in like freaking mid May or maybe even earlier, it decided to fly up to freaking 90 degrees one day, then next day or so went back to being 60. For a while now it has been even raining, but now it's warming up a bit again. Weathers very sporadic these days.

It's been mostly cool by me, usually in the 70s, up until two or three weeks ago Low-mid 80s on average, except for the past week, which has been in the upper 80s-low 90s. And it was almost 100 the other day. Plus constant thunderstorms and horrible humidity.

It's the first day of summer and I already can't wait for fall. ☐

Iceland is a weird place. The warmest it has ever got in the capitol on record was 79 degrees. But apparently going below 5 degrees in winter is very rare. Hell, looking at this, the record low for the capitol is -3. So it stays within a pretty contained temperature throughout like the entire year. 55 degrees in summer, low of 45 (record low in the hottest month of summer is 36). Winter average is a high of 35 and a low of 25. Temperature change isn't very drastic at all.

Where I live, 20 degree changes aren't exactly unheard of for weather in a day, if not more. And here, Iceland barely does 10 ☐

They don't even get much precipitation, either, apparently. 33 inch's a year (This is for the capitol, other locations are different). Though they do get snow every year I believe. And that's more precipitation than Seattle gets (Yes, Seattle gets less than that, despite being called the rainy state and rainy city. Not a lot of heavy precipitation, just lots and lots of cloudy days and light rain). I think where I live gets more, though...

Iceland is one of my top travel destinations, that's why I know so much about it ☐ I want to go there all thanks to music...

And mine seem to be warmer places, despite the fact that I hate warm weather. ☐

The Caribbean, Mexico, Brazil, Argentina...South and Central America in general are places I want to go to. Also parts of the Middle East and Africa.

The thing with me is I grew up in the mountains, so that automatically makes me want to go to places with beautiful mountains first. But there's beautiful areas I'd love to go to everywhere.

Probably my 2nd to least favorite Secret Chiefs 3 album. It just doesn't do as much for me.

However, this song, and Zombievision 2012, are awesome.
