Such an act would be punished with life imprisonment in the dungeons beneath Boughbury Castle (formerly known as the Castle of the Two Sisters) or execution by timberwolf.

Engaging in armed insurrection against the establishment government.

Not a crime, but as cats are very popular and considered superior to all other pets, it is very much frowned upon in Ambrossa. Why, do have something to share? hides gun behind back

Cuba does not exist in Equus or Griffonia and so is irrelevant in that regard. However, any bombings within the Everfree would be punished with imprisonment or execution by timberwolves or other means. If this person flees the Everfree successfully, then tracking them down and bringing them back to face justice is essentially out of the equation and would likely not be pursued.

Vandalising an important historical monument.

If you don't commit any other crimes with the vehicle, you must return the vehicle, (usually) pay for any damages, and pay a small fine of 5% of your wealth.

Depends on why you tried to hijack the plane, did you have a weapon (if so what kind), etc., but anywhere from a few years (if you had no weapon) to life in prison

Also you're definitely on a permanent no-fly list no matter how you

Define "terrorism". If you're blowing up civvies, then expect retaliation, or possible obliteration; if you're damaging government property, then you'll probably be frozen. Also, probably depends on location; you're a heck of a lot more likely to be vaporised for driving a tank in Neo-Kirkukihara than you are in, say, one of the autonomous Saharan districts.
