"Ok so right now your priority is to be Ralis' mentor and sort of guide him to become a proper leader which is definitely a good idea since he's literally the future of the domain. I may not agree with a monarchy but it give an exception to all the nations within Hyrule since the social structure there is different and abuses of power aren't as common as from where I came from. Also, just say that you disagree with Ralis about being too optimistic about the future, it's not like he's gonna execute you for that, I've met Ralis before and he's chill.

Moving on, you're quite skilled in swimming since you're a fish human and I like how you emphasize that it is something to be learned not something you're good at from the beginning and I can relate to you with this since a lot of people think Sherechians are great riders since they were born, well no, there's a lot of practice and getting bucked off involved.

Lastly, what's your opinion on knight general? Because I heard rumors that everyone now fears the Hylans for becoming too strong. "

My personal thoughts concerning
'Aleki Kuresa'

"Goodness...immediately I have stopped reading on this 'Aleki Kuresa' because the contents of this...'biography' (and to call it a biography is an insult to biographies based in reality) is offensive to an avid reader such as my wife and I. Books can be anything written by its author, but this? Lies, every word in every page, all of it are lies. And books written in a way that illustrates its author as 'the most excellent prodigy' are works of an egotist detached from reality. I will end this here, I am going to find a real book to read."

Regent of the Zora, Avau

"I must iterate, I had not expected to be met with yet another strange character at the moment of time, considering of the fact that had been the recent description I had given in relation to Queen Alexandria. If one would allow me to collect the thoughts of which I have, I am willing to talk promptly...

Ah, on this day I am met by sir Oswald of the Imperial Fatherland, correct? I must question of why, and in addition how the outside description of yourself mentions the death of self, for as I witness you are very much still alive. There may indeed be some force of which I am not familiar with in action, however I must digress, for this mention is very much so one that should not be focused on, in consideration of the idea that written dialogue simply can not respond to myself.

To begin, I shall comment that it seems that the life of which you have led is seemingly similar to his highness'. For you had been birthed into royalty and had been named Prince at the age of ten. I am yet to be certain if that had ever been announced personally by Queen Rutela, in relation to Prince Ralis before her demise, nevertheless I must continue. At fifteen years of age, you had been thrown into danger and conflict in this Great War, of what such conflict may entail. I must comment on the young age of which you had been, yet to be forced to combat a danger to the so called "Fatherland", I must respectfully communicate my condolences for yourself...

Nevertheless, as the outside description of yourself had seemed to avoid mentioning much on the the topic, I must assume that you had come out of the conflict relatively unscathed, for it seems that Hylia had granted yourself mercy in those dangerous days. Certainly, this is different from his highness, Prince Ralis.

In the haste of my actions, I apologise that I had yet to mention on the coronation of oneself. A congratulations for being chosen over Alexandar, for it seems your actions to this point in time has proven your competence.

I shall comment that, by the secession of conflict in your realm, your views on the wider world had most certainly been solidified, correct? Your willingness to protect your people with force if necessary, despite your rather pacifistic nature is commendable, for it shows pragmatism, a quality of which is seldom given the heed of which it deserves. Nevertheless, I advise that you may remain vigilant for the world and the actions of which it may perform, for it is more than likely that those in the power of the realms of which flank your own may have less than benevolent intentions, though I may not have the intelligence of your world to say for certain. I see no issue of the so called "conservative" beliefs of which you hold. Surely it makes pragmatic sense to condone heterosexual ideals, for the same gender most certainly can not produce offspring, correct? By any means, such comments on this "Anti-Communist" stance are above my intelligence, so I must apologise for being unable to comment on the matter...

To conclude, I must comment that yourself, your Majesty Oswald are a figure worthy of respect, and a man of which I hope that his highness, Prince Ralis may become in the future... Driven by ideals, yet pragmatic and a figure of reason when needed. Indeed, I would be willing to speak with sir at a different time if it ever becomes the truth, however for the time being, I bid you farewell."

Opinions concerning
Mawar al-Sherbak, President of Gonswanza

President Mawar al-Sherbak is a man who I, despite his intimidating stature and personality, have little concern for. While I agree with the fundamental values of ensuring one's military is fed, equipped and trained, it is ultimately to his nation's detriment that they have chosen to isolate themselves in such a manner; protecting one's citizens and their value from international conglomerates and states with malignant intents is one thing, but it is another to dilly-dally and not choose any side. He is misguided for this position in my view.

A fundamental disagreement I have with President al-Sherbak is his attitude regarding the usage of chemical weapons. They are heinous and a stain upon human decency, and his readiness to utilise them whenever is frankly disgusting and shameful. The levels of cruelty that his administration have embraced is unacceptable and for this reason alone I have cause to oppose him and his nation in their entirety from hereon.

Melding^[1] on the so-called "Sword of Beproving^[2]"

This "thing", for the lack of a better word, is a hireling^[3] working for someone called "Frederick Großmann", leader of a band of thieves that seems to have gotten out of hand. His name even seems Deoch^[4]; shame be upon me to share that with him. I would say filth like these outlaws are unworthy of any sort of aught^[5] or even heed^[6], but whatever weak regering^[7] even gave Großmann leave to go on with his forbreakings^[8] is worth no more than him and his paltry lawbreakers.

Sawyer, the so-called "Sword of Beproving^[2]", seems to be the bastard of an otherwise upright kin. Giving up on following through with an upright life, she (as the sheet reads, that thing is said to be a "she") roamed the streets as a beggar to care for herself, going through harm and hunger, until meeting an elder hireling and coming into his wardship^[9]. Becoming a hireling herself, Sawyer gained her byname from a "dwimmersword^[10]" that she kept for herself after a plight^[11] gone awry.

Indeed "doing the one thing she knows how", Sawyer's work as a hireling was far from done. Falling in love with a workgiver^[12], and going as far as to wed the aforesaid workgiver, things would go awry yet again as her lover was shot dead—on the day of the pair's wedding, no less. The tragedy of it all gave me a laugh while reading through.

Moving on, Sawyer somehow found herself under Here^[13] Großmann after fulfilling her wreak, no tweek^[14] doing gruesome and unlawful work. If anything, I would say her path as an earn^[15] child tossed aside by Lady Luck had been set from the start, like so many other outlaws whom gained names for themselves. Her fortelling^[16] is one of rising up, only to be pulled back down by orlay^[17]. Do not get me wrong, I hold no love for folk like her, but one cannot help but feel ruth^[18] at it all. Sad indeed, but the Law cares not for sadness.

That is all.

My personal thoughts concerning 'Herr von Bromberg'

"Between Herr von Bromberg and I, he is a real military leader. and I respect a great many in the Army who have risen up the ranks, who have been trusted the honour and the duty of commanding an army of their own; to lead and to win battles or lose battles; to serve the fatherland. Yes, Herr von Bromberg is like all of the Empire's generals: they are better suited in the military, they often make for poor politicians. Unfortunately, Herr von Bromberg is a capable military leader and experienced commander still - however, as Redesforsitter, he fared poorly during his tenure in Parisii Paris. Herr von Bromberg's violent crackdowns on starving civilians and the subsequent bloodshed that followed are inexcusable.

"And I notice he is also a man of faith..but he has very little of it. Speaking as a ruler of similar faith, any man like von Bromberg who says that God must "earn" his worship is a stupid, faithless man. And to say such things are the ramblings of the faithless and the misguided. God is not enslaved to his creations, he is not von Bromberg's servant. Here is my advice to him - he should know that since God included free will when he created his angels, our human parents Adam and Eve, von Bromberg is given a choice: either he will improve his standing his creator and father or turn his back and leave."

"So first things first; I am honestly somewhat confused by the combination of the High Princess' title and ideology. In the world I live in there has never been a far-left monarchy in history so this is a first for me, besides don't usually communists hate monarchists? Maybe 'High Princess' is just simply a title and no one ever bothered to change it. I suppose it must be a cultural thing or whatever.

Now then, I see that 'High Princess' Yuri's rotten ideals were already manifested at a young age with her joining the Communist Party after her parents, after which she was indoctrinated towards Maoism, because people cannot form their own opinions without the approval of the damn state or party, of course! Then, of course, used the inner-party purges to rise through the ranks and sucking up to the trust of the then-reigning 'High Princess' like the filthy little opportunist she is. And, to absolutely no one's surprise, she not only partook in but also led her own faction in a three-way power struggle. Oh, how goddamn typical.

And of course, she won said power struggle, which brings us to what Feyrisshire currently has to suffer through. 'High Princess' Reissechi reportedly has a 'Cult of Personality', censors free speech and press, violates human and civil rights, destroyed economic reforms and kills off everyone who even dares to commit the heinous crime of disagreeing with her. And for what? In effort of so-called 'Anti-revisionism'? I don't know about you, but where I'm from we have only one appropriate title for people like Reissechi: Fucking. Tyrant. I have always despised communists, fucking filthy extremists scum whose only solution to problems is to soak their hands in the blood of the innocent. You degenerate little piece of shit likes claim to be fighting for 'the people', and yet you stomp on them constantly with a iron boot...

"After reviewing the files relating to the leader General Townes, we have but one thing to say...Why aren't you shooting your dissidents General? This is a grave mistake from a man who seems to have himself quite put together otherwise and while we are under the impression that he still believes in the foolish ideals of the so-called 'United States' he truly has no reason to. Indeed, modernizing the army with lasers well ahead of most civilizations around the same level of advancement is a commendable achievement and the same can be said for his military record as it would seem that every operation he participated in ended in success and yet he still keeps himself bound by that piece of paper they call a constitution? Townes, we are not sure if you are aware but you have crossed the Rubicon as your people say. You have overthrown an elected government and now it is up to you to forge your own path for America and it would seem democracy has no place in it so allow me to give you this one piece of advice. Shoot your dissidents. if they are threatening to overthrow you as you did the last leader then kill them before they can do so; do not bother with the petty games of electoralism and the court of public opinion, overthrow the board and let your people know that it is you that is in charge, not them. They may be quarrelsome at first, but once they learn to appreciate the caring hand of the state they will cease their foolishness and submit to you.

We hope that you take our advice seriously Townes, we see potential in a man such as you and we would be disappointed to see someone who could've been competent overthrown because of some vague 'values' that he has already violated...or don't, you could always trust your country and by extension your entire planet into the trustworthy hands of the Imperium. We would never complain about another planet being delivered into our care and it would stop that war you're dealing with at the moment, not to mention how good assimilation would be for the human race. This is aside the point however, our opinion on the general is neutral for the time being. He has accomplished many great things, but he has yet to prove that he is willing to do what is necessary to carve a new path for America."

"I could say a lot of positive things about The Paramount, unfortunately, his policy of expansion and assimilation represents a menace to the Imperium...ours, not theirs. He is also a tyrant who is enslaving the population and is creating a repressive state that wouldn't anything to envy to the nations of 1984. In conclusion, The Paramount and his Imperium are rivals and a potential threat to Remulia and its inhabitants"

"Ikuzu is not the worst person I've met, he's just a bit conservative, maybe authoritarian for my taste, ID chips, no smoking, no booze, no cars. At least he's not conservative and capitalist because that's just neoliberal double standards at its worst and he provides universal healthcare for his people however I hope you have good public transport to compensate for no cars... wait does everyone drive tanks there? Yeah I don't really know what your priorities are but ok. But who am I to judge you, I'm friends with the supreme leader of some highly conservative Islamic Republic.

But hey, banning cars is just giving me an argument to ride Daikan to work."

"That Daikan is a tough steed, not as heavy as I figured though. Listen, no offense to the guy, but Inugu's double-digit IQ really showed when he kept hopping back on this beast after it threw him off. Listen, I'm a city guy, I'll always be a city guy, I don't know shit about livestock or rams or horses or whatever, I drive a car, you feel me? Let me tell you, you couldn't pay me enough to hop on that fucker, I don't care how safe you claim he is, plus, putting a muscular seven-foot-two guy on an animal used to carrying a stringy revolutionary the size of a child- no offense again, is just plain mean, I'd give the poor thing scoliosis or something! Anyway, Daikan sorta reminds me of a four-legged version of some army buddies I have, all rough and violent but loyal to the death. Daikan and Inugu have a good thing going and I salute them for it.

I'm going to be honest with you: given the fact that simply the looks of your vehicles are scary enough for me to begin thinking about enacting War Plan Z, I was expecting something way, WAY more eldritch-ish than you... Speaking about the looks, you're pretty handsome and I wouldn't mind going out for a walk with you... If I was into men that is. Although we disagree politically, you neither the less are a honorable warrior, defending your people and that's more than enough for me to wage my full support for you. I'd ask you for a duel, but I'm too afraid of you deleting me out of existence in matter of nanoseconds...
