Depends on the corrupt act but may range from fines, public whipping, enslavement or even torturous public execution if egregious enough. On top of that, the offender gets dismissed and perpetually banned from any government positions.

Harboring wanted spies or terrorists?

Minimum 5 years in federal prison and a minimum $10,000 fine (on top of the taxes owed), exact sentence would vary depending on the case.

Depends on what you do whilst you're impersonating the officer. For just impersonating them, you get a 2 years jail sentence. If you commit another crime whilst impersonating the officer, the two years are doubled and added on to the maximum penalty for the other crime that was committed.

Immediate extradition from office. Depending on the offense, anywhere from a fine of 1-years salary to 1 1/2 years jail time. And the person(s) are unable to run for office at any level of government every again.

Above above nation: All members of the government are monitored to avoid corruption. Whether or not they are punished really depends on what they are doing, but if they are trying to give more power to one person or trying to pass an unconstitutional law they will likely be impeached or just voted out of the government.

Above nation: Being forced to fight against dangerous animals with just the knife you used, if you die you die, if you live you will likely be sent into war. (Unless you did it out of self defense, then you face no punishment)
