Peru and Inkopolitia went to war in 1831, and fought for twelve years in a conflict that had surprisingly low casualties for a war that long.

Washington DC wasn't destroyed, its just been renamed to Di'si.
Also, I haven't even mentioned anything about DC in my factbooks yet, so I have no idea where you got that idea in the first place.

Post-revolutionary Logikie tried to be progressive in terms of rights and equality, and for that purpose it pushed for a nationwide irreverence towards religion.

Religion is extremely important to their society with the nation being named after their god and religious men called Golden Men are the ones that administer places and carry out the will of the throne as opposed to noblemen

Logikie's history begins with a group of students studying (redundant, sorry!) socialism. One certain individual, named "Rukav", started organizing guerillas to free the indigenous people from foreign control.

A de facto state lacking universal or near-universal recognition of sovereignty, Cascadia is a corporatocracy founded on American territories and controlling about two states, plus two halves of other states. They received significant financial support from China and Russia, and are implied to be under their political influence. They are currently embroiled in a war against America known as the War for the West. They also appear to have institutions for slavery, though they call their slaves 'drones'.
