In the 12 days since the Second Carthaginian War has started, close to 10,000 soldiers alone have been killed, and that's not even getting into the civilian casualties or just injuries. That's... brutal. Way more brutal than any war has a right to be in the 21st century.

It seems that New Valhalla is former Viking (and later English and Danish) colony that has the territories of Connecticut and Rhode Island.

It was originally an economic and military alliance that centralised in the early 16th century as republic.

Until 1985, their rules of succession were based on male premogeniture. It was shifted to absolute primogeniture afterwards, so that males and females could have an equivalent opportunity to take the throne.

Anyways, apparently their ideology is a mix of Freudian psychology and Marxism, which I gotta be honest, sounds pretty cursed.

Water is provided by the ocean, fluorinated and purified, and used to bathe in, drink and wash in as well as farms which produce a staggering amount of produce. What is not eaten is composted.

They have a wall on their Eastern flank known as the Athenax Wall, which appears to be of similar scale to the Great Wall of China. There is speculation that this wall was meant to defend against some form of dire threat that once came from the east, but there is little indication as to what this threat might have been.

Like many human societies throughout history...and ourselves...the Godulars find comfort (or better phrased, motivation) in the discomfort of being surrounded by hostile powers in a vast universe. This pervasive Otherness is a threat to their safety impulses them to cultivate their defensive and offensive capabilities.

Well, they comply with the ban on MIRVs set in NEW START, yet still have chemical and biological weapons. So apparently MIRVs are bad, but anthrax, SARS, foot-mouth disease, ricin, VX, and smallpox are fine?

I mean, we do have both no biological weapons whatsoever anyway, so who am I to judge

Their security clearance terms are likely parallel with those of the United States considering the use of the phrase "TOP SECRET", however they go from 1 to 5 (or higher) instead of 5 to 1.

So let me get this straight:

1. They managed to capture Hitler.
2. They didn't kill him so he wouldn't become a martyr.
3. His punishment was being sent to jail and given newspapers to show him how his nation was being rebuilt.
4. Hitler began being called the "Third Rate Napoleon".

That might be the strangest turn of events ever in an alternate history.
