And to think that I sometimes complain when an album is under 40 minutes long.

Though 35 and below is when I really think it is getting short.

Fear Factory's a good band, need to listen to more of them, I've heard only Mechanize and The Industrialist.

[Fear Factory - \[Memory Imprints\] Never End](#)

The songs I'm listening to are from the album Obsolete. Mechanize and The Industrialist are better titles if you ask me, since Obsolete is one of the albums from the period where Fear Factory tried to curry favor with the nu metal crowd. Not that it's a bad album, but Fear Factory is simply at its best when they rage hard.

In that case I would recommend Fear Factory's debut album Soul Of A New Machine, the fierce remix EP Fear Is The Mindkiller and their breakthrough record Demanufacture.

I'll just check all the albums. The other day when I was going through Bathory's discography for the first time, I got a comment "skip Requiem and go for X" (can't remember which one he recommended). I just said "the fuck you talking about, Requiem is one of their best albums."

Requiem is pleasant enough, but personally I prefer Under The Sign Of The Black Mark and Blood Fire Death. Bathory is another band which can be found in my music collection, since I have a soft spot for classic black and death metal.

For me Requiem, Under the Sign of the Black Mark and their self title are about equal. But the best single song imo is The Wheel of Sun.
