But their revolutionary moxie and willingness to abide the will of the people—if they're sincere about that, I'll give them a shot. I considered the Democratic Party of the Popular Revolution, but... eh, they're too willing to roll with the reformist Homelenders. Makes me really wonder about how revolutionary the DPPR really is, y'know? The PMR is also in the ruling coalition, but at least they haven't committed to 'always' support the reformists. I like a little flexibility, remind the
