This thread is long so it has probably already been mentioned, but the countless Habsburg inspired monarchist nations (on that note plenty of Soviet inspired ones as well). There also tends to be a lot of super authoritarian nations with edgy views, and every time I see them I really hope they don't reflect the player's actual irl views. Additionally, alternate history type nations are popular.

I suppose I sort of fall into cliché territory myself since mine is basically a fictional version of Yugoslavia based in a fictional world with fictional standards for real world nations. For example, Krasniya is essentially just Russia/USSR.

(Ignore Factbook for now. It is being redone...eventually.)

My nation is arguably cliché since it's got Germanic influence, but I'm just the Shakespeare Alastair nation at this point. Shrugs.

Yea, Germanic nations are super common. I was trying to be somewhat unique back when I created Czervienka. At the time I didn't really see many Yugo-inspired nations around. Plus I kind of genuinely believe in the ideals in my nation irl.

Oddly enough I've seldom seen a Habsburg-inspired nation on NS. I mean, I've seen some where Habsburgs exist in some capacity in the larger scope but none where a Habsburg or Habsburg-esque monarchy is in charge.

What I have seen too many times to count (and, admittedly, usually from the same person) is European Monarchies but they're basically the English system and even then only a meme-tier understanding thereof.

Honestly, I think most players on here have a pretty shallow understanding of the systems they're trying to emulate. I like to think I'm at least somewhat realistic with my portrayals of socialism/communism since it's actually my irl ideology. For a lot of the monarchist nations I feel like the players either just really like the aesthetics or are satirizing monarchism as an ideology.

Well, Germany, especially in anime, has peak aesthetics one can use, so of course it's very popular. Personally I'd like it if the choice of aesthetic and basis was a bit more varied, as all the Germany clones get rather similar at times, but one can't deny it's popular for a reason.

German nations following a certain terrible ideology used to be a thing too, but then Swastikas were banned. I think because of that some kind of laid off the Nazi Germany inspired nations. There's still some I think, but they just don't use Swastikas.

I've noticed even MT nations in fictional worlds or continents still tend to be heavily based on some real counterpart, very rarely do you see something truly original

I maintain that NSG, while it's always had problems (like every board here, anyone who claims otherwise is either lying or doesn't remember all the dogshit threads/posts from 'the good old days'), was genuinely a much better board prior to the 2016 US Presidential election.

The whole internet was better prior to the elections

Multiversal News: The Star systems Gushk and Fisyk have reappeared after a thousand years all citizens that live in the neighboring systems are to report for purification || The Eternal Archon wishes to inform everyone that any news about the loss of the eastern part of Heshok are lies made by the terran menace |||| Travel to the Polsik system is suspended due to suspected heretic infiltrations.||

I'd argue it was still tolerable until they dissolved RW/LWDT, getting rid of the one thing that contained the more toxic elements of NSG regulars was not a good idea, nor was getting rid of LWDT.

Honestly I'd say maybe it's time for the mods to review the long-standing site policy of 'you can discuss and debate almost any political viewpoint here, so long as it's done within the site rules' or something.

Not saying I want the mods to necessarily go 'OK we will no longer allow X, Y, and Z ideologies to be discussed on the site' but maybe start being a bit more heavy handed in rule enforcement towards users who either openly admit to following extremist politics or can clearly be seen that they do based on the contents of their posts in OOC boards, in order to get the more extremist/toxic NSG users to either shape up or ship out.
