They, first of all, spend way too much time on their factbooks (not hating). They are part of New England! 😊

Loli County is well known for its Peregrine Falcons.

The Republic of Escadia

Long ago during the breakup of Pangaea, there's a strange loud volcanic explosion takes place what was once Mount Howard began to widen but as time passes, volcanic activity has been spiked in both North American and European tectonic plates caused some more seamounts to raise up above the sea level, while in Escadia, the raising of seamounts had caused Mount Howard island to absorb the remaining islands into what is now known as Escadia.

Naval Monteans are a mixed culture, compressed of basically all people in the Mediterranean with some things from other cultures, like Celtic.

That Waisnor's the origin of a number of things that're considered strange to outsiders (e.g. that massive Waisnorian New Year's game).

Slightly less than one in every six in Waisnor adheres to Judaism. Going by their population, this would be around 483,817 people. By numbers, it's not much, but it would in real life mean Waisnor has the third largest Jewish population by numbers alone and the second by percentage of the population.

Many on earth believe that Mars has a generally uniform and bland climate due to its terraforming, but in reality Martian climate is diverse. There's a warm and humid tropical zone, which has the bulk of Mars's population, while the Martian capital is located in a zone they consider to have a paradisiacal environment.

AN: There's not much information at the moment, but from what it looks like, they're the result of Sweden colonising OTL Rhodesia (I mean the region, not the former nation of South Rhodesia). They have a large white population (probably the largest outside of South Africa and some coastal cities in the North), Norwegian and Swedish both have official status as languages, and they follow a model of direct democracy

"I got you guys covered."

@Zuamaland

"Zuamaland is a landlocked South African Country with a population of 26+ million individuals. It's capital is Mutota but it's most populated city is Lusaka. It has an odd combination of common languages spoken including Swedish, Norwegian and less exotically to the country Swahili."

@House of Alfbad

"The current residing King of the Frisians and Danes is Alfbad IV born June, 6th, 1008.

He is uniquely an unelected monarch by the nobility of both kingdoms... which I guess means that they had a good old constitutional monarchy before him then? His father was Ijsbrecht III King of the Frisians and his mother was Frida, Queen-Regnant of Denmark which I guess gave him dual claim to both thrones? Although less so in his Mothers side but if I'm reading this right the other successors did an oopsy."

Apparently Sweden-Norway continued to exist -no independence of Norway in the 1900s- and it was a somewhat major colonial empire. Then in the 1939, the Soviets invaded and overthrew the monarchy to establish puppet states, which made the royal family -alongside every sane Swede or Norwegian- escape to the colonies, most importantly Zambezi. That also later failed because the first generation to live under the monarchy decided that monarchy was overrated and revolted against them.

On their map, Rome -- which I understand refers to the Roman Empire of old -- still exists, but is constantly under massive revolts because people didn't exactly appreciate the invasion and conquests and whatnot.

On an unrelated note, I was looking at the little military symbols and I just knew they were Paradox. Never actually played Crusader Kings myself, but the general art style gave it away. Nice choice!

Over the past 25 years of their history, Waisnor has had 3 nominations and 1 win in academy award for best foreign film. Which is honestly less than I expected for a nation like theirs which has a large cultural scene.
