Ah, enjoy. My favorites are Ride Into Obsession, Curse My Name, and the mighty Wheel of Time.

For their show, I have to drive 4 hours to get to the venue, then 4 straight back to return home in time for a presentation the next morning. Definitely worth it! I couldn't not go ... it might be their last US tour ever.

Why?

I'm so glad I live an hour 1/2 from Seattle ☐

There's actually a place I could have lived that is a bit more expensive that is still in the middle of nowhere but is only 30 minutes from Seattle. A nice balance.

They've hinted that their next album will finally be this orchestral concept album that they've been working on on-the-side for the last 15 years. It's been speculated that it will be their final release. Since they're getting a little older and get much better crowds in Europe, a US tour of this size that comes near me (central Texas) is far from guaranteed to happen again. But who knows, maybe they still have many more albums and trips to Texas in them ☐

Well, this comes as interesting/unexpected news to me...

Windir - "Journey to the End"

Black/Folk/Viking Metal from the album 1184 (2001)

I am really enjoying what I hear, but despite this the band hasn't quite clicked with me just yet.

I mean, we can actually create a mathematical definition for evolution in terms of the evolutionary algorithm and then write code to deal with abstract instances of evolution, which basically equates to mathematical proof that evolution works. All that remains is to show that biological systems replicate in such a way as to satisfy the minimal criteria required for evolution to apply to them, something which has already been adequately shown time and again. At this point, we've pretty much proven that not only can evolution happen, it pretty much must happen since it's basically impossible to prevent it from happening.
