Usual punishment for impersonation, including repaying any possible damages to the impersonated and a potential short time in prison.

Openly burning the nation's constitution (or another main law book)?

If it's an original/historical version of the constitution, like the first constitution, you'd get one hefty fine plus prison time, for knowingly destroying a historical artifact, however, if it's a new, modern copy it's protected by freedom of speech and not a crime.

Fine, probably get a stout warning, although you probably won't get any permanent criminal record for it, plus paying the cost of the lotion, which BTW; No, you don't get to keep.

Ticket for first time offense (50 NSD fine for the first twenty MPH over the speed limit, +5 NSD for each additional MPH past that). Anything below 15 MPH over is fine. One-half year jail time for each unpaid ticket after two months.

Driving (even while abiding the law perfectly and safely) without a permit or license?

Maybe the perpetrator will end up in a mental institution due to public order violation, but overall nothing serious- most likely a milizioner (policeman) will ask the singing to be stopped, otherwise giving a 24-hour detainment.

Categorised as petty crime; usually only resolved locally. When the damage is too bad, the home owner could sue the perpetrator in court, with sentences ranging from fines and community service to actual jailtime, though rarely exceeds 1 year in prison if ever convicted.

Heavy public endangerment with a lot of fines, property confiscation and, most likely, imprisonment of up to 10 years. If at least 5 people died than death penalty, otherwise kill list. If somehow repeated offense death penalty

Drawing is not a crime. However, forging images is a crime and can result in eight months to three years in prison, along with a fine to be paid for the offended person. This law protects not just the leader, but every citizen.
