Monkey 5609 had their life support unplugged.

People tend to assume that Entrance of the Gladiators by Julius Fučík is what that ever so famous circus clown theme is. And in a way, it is. Nobody would ever argue with you on this fact.

However, if you want to be an unlikable, pedantic jerk, the song actually known to be circus music would be a version composed for American woodwind bands (and later transcribed for fairground organs) titled Thunder and Blazes, published by Louis-Philippe Laurendeau.

Of course, this information is of absolutely no consequence to anyone.

Monkey 5905 was a guest on Baking With Alphonse. He was accidentally lightly battered and deep fried and eaten by an audience member, who subsequently also died of a previously-undiagnosed monkey allergy.

We are told that Monkey 5903 died off-screen, but there is no mention of how.

munitions plant.

Monkey 5459 thought he's Monkey 5460 until the real Monkey 5460 returned and bashed his head in.

Monkey 5458's heavily abused 1998 Chevy Cavalier became a living breathing creature and then ran him over and proceeded to chomp on his remains.

Monkey 5357 was supposed to execute Monkey 5458's Chevy Cavalier for murder, but it turned out that they were really bad at tying knots. The Cavalier promptly broke free and Monkey 5357 suffered the same fate as Monkey 5458.

Monkey 5456 used a bazooka to destroy the Chevy Cavalier, however the resulting explosion sent a large portion of the vehicle crashing into it and consequently turning it into a bloody mess and the scrapped remains of a bazooka and part of a truck.

5448 was born in Bloomington, Indiana in 1922. After returning from fighting in WW2, he went to Ohio State and got a degree in marketing. After that, he settled down in Richmond, VA with his lovely monkey wife who he met while at Ohio State and got a decent paying job in the marketing division of Marlboro. After decades of work, he decided to retire in 1989 and lived a comfy retirement, before succumbing to old age in the year 2010.
