In the rather non-human sense, and more of in the way of "I hope you are not getting random viruses and malware from random people", hehe. Anyway, how have you been, old friend? I see that your nation is still holding well and fine, so I am glad to hear that. You seem to have a bit of an agenda towards the LGBT, but you and I both know that I don't like to dwell too much into politics. I am positive on you still, and hey, I hope you have been well!

Well, "friend" in a rather loose sense of the definition, because I have been thinking way too many times of what you think about me or the things I like. " Ah, General Valentijn. Such a great man. As a ruler of a nation, he has my respect already. This is due to his proven strength and resilience. No one charges into a killing ground and comes back alive, except him apparently. By resilience, I am not referring to mere physical resilience, but he has shown emotional resilience as well. In the war, he almost certainly lost at least a handful of loved ones. Did he break down and wait for death? No. He got up and helped rebuild society. The choice he made to adopt many names is wise in my estimation. After all, it symbolizes a desire for various cultures to live in peace. The tragic part of his story is the fact that he must wear a radiation suit all the time, which must be hell, yet he is still one of the kindest people known to man. My opinion is wholeheartedly positive, except for the fact he got sick of killing. In those pre-war times, he should've become an arms manufacturer and made his obeisance to the one true deity, the Great God Profit."

This song plays in the background

It was a hot sunny day in Lake Kivu as the sun dawned upon the lands of Rwanda and its animals. Armed with a Karabiner 98k, Muller eyed the antelopes peacefully roaming about in the fields in peace. That was until the Devil of Ruanda personally came to show up for a hunt. One, Two, Three, BAM! The antelope fell in an instant. There was a shit-eating grin look on the man and he only thought how good its head would look in his office. Bureaucracy, paperwork be damned! Regency Cabinet

"A very handsome and attractive young man with less-than-ideal but still crimsonly attractive politics. President la Salle is a wonderkin of leadership and Convallaria is fortunate to have him at the helms. I expect great things to come out of his Presidency and Nation as his term progresses."

- Prince-Regent of the Swiss Confederate, Monarch of the Swiss, Alexandra de Lucerne.

"While Ah politically might not agree on matters o' policy wit' the Regent here, Ah'm still impressed by 'er. She's towin' a fine line 'tween anarchy an' tyranny, an' as far 's Ah can see, she's towin' it well. Though Ah must admit, the whole assemblage o' state seems mighty skewed in 'er country, what with her bein' the prince-regent and holdin' absolute power despite th' position o' King technically bein' filled by... God? Wait, am Ah readin' this right? As in, the capital-G God? Well, that's certainly a... surprise, all things considered. Oh, well, Ah've already said th' Regent's a decent enough gal, and Ah'm a man to stand by my words, so Ah guess that's that."

"I'm more impressed by a leader if they have some military experience instead of just being a politician who rose through the ranks. With that being said, I do still commend Paterson. He seems like a nice, chill guy. He is a capitalist, so that is always great. Other than all of that, I don't really have much else to say."

"Reading about his early history, I rather enjoy how adventurous and bold Paterson was. Reading about how his mother died is a tragedy, but I'm sure he's found some willpower to move on, as evidenced by his more recent history"

Kristu Salv I-imperatur!

"Sylvia and Julienne are one of the most wonderful sisters I've known in my life. Their hardwork and effort in sending their country victorious during the great wars of yore is incredible, one I must learn to apply myself in the war for Carthage. Speaking of it, I find myself extremely grateful for the sisters to allow Leuchtende Rose to perform for boosting our troop morale. Now, Carthage is ours, and soon, the others will fall too. Thank you, sisters."
