Either life in prison or you get to replace the person you poisoned, depending upon how happy the citizens are with the government.

Assuming you somehow survive the whole ordeal and the likely shooting you would receive it would be punished under attempted coup of the government and a class 1 act of terrorism- Both punishable by death.

AN: Religion is banned, so while burning down a religious building is not a crime, you would be arrested for religious advocacy, and sentenced to a base 3 years reeducation, with an additional 3 years on account of violent actions motivated by religion.

Refusing to relinquish political power after fairly losing reelection

The soldiers closest at hand remove all decorations of public office from the losing politician, and a mob of people carry the loser to the edge of the city, to be ceremoniously dumped by the side of the road.

The people have voted; the people have the power.

What happens if one should return a library book one month over due?
