Assuming you're talking about "libertarian socialism", you might be surprised to find out that the term "libertarian" was originally coined to refer to left-wing and socialist ideologies, and it wasn't until the mid-20th century that it really began being widely associated with right-libertarianism, which is what I'm assuming is what comes to mind for you when you hear the word "libertarian".

Not gonna do a whole discourse about this here though, so feel free to telegram me if you wish to discuss it further.

Does this mean the stats operate on their own schedule? Or does the person who's making up the stats have their own schedule? I'm confused
