Li's field 2.0 In Action

so school's back?

Li's field is a widely known satire conspiracy theory in Hong Kong (Just like Birds Aren't Real in the US); which says that the city's richest billionaire has developed a force field to divert typhoons from the city to avoid economic losses and causing these "holidays" for workers (Hong Kong is designed thoroughly to withstand typhoons, the metro connects houses, malls, offices and school with tunnels and footbridges anyways). This is surprisingly and hilariously seemingly true; as for many years, every major city in the northern coast of the south china sea has experienced typhoons except Hong Kong, and many typhoons mysteriously repel to the opposite direction during their heading to the city, or decrease in size to the point that it dies by the time it reaches the city.
