The Statement on Clarissa

"Ouch, she seems to love using that courier font in one of her ways of response, and for some of us it brings back nightmares of coding, while it excites those who found maths and programming ez pezz. Also, we could say that she is so damn tall, but for Valentinians it would be an understanding. So, let's move in the intel."

"She is a robot from another dimension? Huh, it seems that if it is true, then she would confirm the theory that multiverses do exist, even if we wouldn't be able to visit an one in our lifetime. It seems that a lot of her life and Valentine Z as a whole is connected to Burma, which is a bit strange - we would expect someone like Americans or Russians to try making such a large robot. When she was activated, she fought back against the Valentijn, even though he had no intention to attack her, and later on she presented herself as "pacifist and peaceful"? That sounds a bit more like sneakily escaping from getting bonked in head with an EMP for us, but perhaps it is because of our cynicism hardened by USSR and war with em! Uzbeks."

"Now to the personality - being eccentric and erratic can be good for creativity if you are an artist of some kind, but governance requires more sound minds. Although we understand the reason she likes nursery rhymes, those are still for children, and we prefer folk music."

"Surprisingly enough, we couldn't find an ounce of her political views in her intel, so we just assumed she was a centrist, and moved to her robot stats instead. To be fair, we didn't understand much about the numbers of CPU, GPU, sensors, data storages and other things, considering just how absurdly high some of those were, but we managed to pull out that she has received additional upgrades in the past, and that she is a "cheerful robot" - cheerful ones are suspicious, because you can drive fear in sad citizens to control them, but not for cheerful ones."

The Lowbloodian crown is not one of purity, it's cold and tainted, I wonder if you could handle it, Heh.

"There's something about Oswald, some sort of germanic sensibility, that just really speaks to me. From a political perspective I find Oswald's policies to be both innovative and rationally coherent. His position with regards to the communists couldn't be more eloquently put, and it pains me to hear that his parents, like so many others, were claimed by the encroaching red shadows with which we must do our damndest to eliminate. Consequently, I couldn't agree more with the disciplinary measures he has imposed in light of this threat, and if we're being quite honest, I find them somewhat inspiring. While I may disagree with his non-secular religious philosophies, I think that Oswald's ingenuity and sense of ethics not only highlights the sensibility of his 'iron-clad' power, but encourages a secure, energized trajectory for the Empire. And I wish him the best of luck."

AN: "Ah Christophe! Now where should I begin? I'm certainly an avid supporter of his educational pursuits, after all, physics is the guiding light to which so much scientific advancement is made these days...but enough about that. His social and economic policies speak well to me on...various...levels, and I really appreciate the effort he has made with taxation reforms. Part of my trouble with royalty is that they're arbitrarily given preferential advantages and power, and while small, this sort of effort makes a difference, and while I still might not be very comfortable with the concept of royalty, I do, genuinely, recognise that difference."

Ministry on Foreign and Internal Affairs
Supercomputer Tom
Opinion on the Salle
Status: Not Classified, for public's eye, if necessary

He is an architect with actually good buildings and projects, and an urban theorist? Huh, it seems that he has had an interesting career. His shift from a homeland patriot to a supporter of imperialist values is a noticeable one, and the self-depreciation in public makes him look pretty humble. Now, let's see what's more about him there.

Imagine being orphaned because your parents died in a crash with a drunk driver - now that's a stupid way to get held back at life. At least his artistic skills managed to keep him fighting when he moved through one hell of an orphanage to another. Yeah, it is tough working as a deliver of newspapers. At least he didn't end up on a street.

He seems to have maintained a veneer of sociopathy, yet he also is quite idealistic and strives towards perfection, which can unintentionally benefit others. His ability to emphasize with others is good, especially when to find out their goals, but I think that sometimes it is too sensitive for him, and his experiences in childhood definitely don't help his self-worth. And he avoids close relationships with every but one person, interesting... Just come out of the damn closet already.

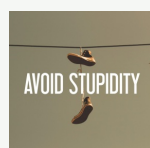

Now for Salle's politics... His support for gold standard is one of the things I could agree on, but I disagree with him lowering taxes to 8% - that's way too low. Also, his apparent ardent hatred towards communism just makes me cringe - perhaps you are not too different from most of other right wingers, after all. Sad thing is, that I actually do agree with some things he also supports - technocracy, nationalism, capital punishment, nuclear research, all of those are good values! Yet on most of things he disagrees with I am the opposite. Who are you kidding by being "against" fascism - if you had to chose between it and communism, I can bet that you would definitely jump on its ship. I also strongly disagree with his support for individualism.

Deutsche Ubbereeste - The German Remnants

Germania Addio (1965)

- Just a community of German immigrants, mercenaries and exiles vibing under their place in the sun. Now comes with two Germanies as well.
- Why yes, I am a Wehraboo and a proponent of National Socialism with a human face, how could you tell?

"Ah, Alastair again? Well, I have decided to do some deeper reading into him, and personally, it is quite different from what I had expected. To summarise, regardless of his rampant alcoholism, he is a man with noble views, ranging from democracy to fairness and all. Anyhow, I hope that just because your name is the same as my brother's, the latter would not turn into yourself in the future!"

"Princess Mary, huh? Strikes me as the type of girl who is only really known for being born into an important family. She also seems really docile and polite. Maybe a little too polite for my tastes... my tastes might be skewed slightly, though. Anyways, she hails from the British Isles. I don't think my granddaughters would take too kindly to that. Well, actually, going back off of my second observation, as long as that docility persists, I can see them maybe becoming friends. Young girls sure love to play around and chat."

Oswald's Mood: Antagonistic

"And here I thought the world was full of evil already, the presence of this witch proved me wrong. Her view of humans as her 'playthings' already produces a disapproving opinion from myself and the people of the fatherland to her, and that will not change in the future; I will hold onto that attitude, brimming with antagonism, against her on the day I am sent to my grave."
- His Imperial Majesty the Emperor of the Imperial Fatherland, Oswald!
