If a civilian did it, then he/she will be given 3 years in prison, along with a 6400R fine. But if such actions are done by a person in the military, then he/she will be issued with a court martial, 1 year in prison, a 6400R fine, and a discharge.

Not a crime. It's a fairly popular patriotic song Germans might sing if they're trying not to offend the French, though it is not the national anthem in Germany as of now.

Not a crime (Right to keep and bear arms). One can unlawfully possess a firearm but firearms aren't illegal in and of themselves. If one is a foreign national, unrestored felon, or a unlicensed and unbonded public servant they may not bear arms except under strict conditions. The foreign national must swear to never take up arms against the Constitution and its adherents. The Felon must have his rights restored by a court of competent jurisdiction, and the public official must prove that it would cause undue job-related hardship not to be armed. The charge can be exile (if a foreign national), 5 years hard labor (if a felon), and defenestration if a bureaucrat.
