Soul Sucker by Ozzy Osbourne.

I just want you to please note that any knowledge I show throughout NS is based off of a 3rd grade education. All this means is that I probably know absolutely nothing about any subject I post about.

The sound of quiet but noticeable whimpering, the whimpering that you at first ignore, thinking it of no consequence, just another kid crying to be let out of the basement, but then you realize that it'd not the kid. It's me. I'm whimpering because I've realized that life is pointless. No matter what we do here, it won't amount to anything. Eventually, the sun will grow large enough that its gravity pulls earth in and engulfs the planet in cleansing flame. Then, later, even the sun, itself, will blow up and die. In the end, nothing really matters because we're all going to die. Then it's all over. There's nothing after that, and, even if there was, it would just exist for its own sake. Tautology has never amounted to anything, either. Life, afterlife, none of it means anything. I realize this, and I weep. I wonder why sentience and sapience exists if it does nothing but reveal the truth of our ultimate pointlessness. Ignorance is, indeed, bliss, and we'd all have been better off if we were still nothing but ignorant monkeys leaping through the branches, oblivious to our own worthlessness. I think this, and I weep. I weep because there's nothing else to do.

No, I'm just joking. Really, I'm listening to "The Sportsman Bar" by Nerf Herder. This is just what happens when I don't get enough sleep.

I can't. I don't have pancakes. I've got some chocolate chip waffles, though.
