When I read Great Kiu's factbook, it kinda reminds me of the Mongols, so I'll assume it was heavily inspired from the Mongolian Empire.

From what I can gather from their totally-not English 1:1 word-swap which made things tedious and difficult to read:

Newptolem of Metanoea, playing Alexander the Great, united the city-states of classical Diarcesia by force and diplomacy, and then in a startling divergence in his role, proceeded to instead of create a massive Diarcesian empire fucked right off to somewhere half a continent away to make his own empire, with blackjack and hookers, thus throwing united Diarcesia into chaos in the absence of a capable ruler.

If I understand it right, Ari's name could also be Akhens-Ardri and it'd mean the same thing?

It could be. The -ri/-dri suffix is largely based on both my personal preference and the length of the name; "arah", the base, is a very short name so Ari flows better. "Vhiar" also becomes "Vhiari" because "Vhiar" ends in an r. But, say, "Vashah" would become "Vashadri", so it's possible it can be based on whether or not the base name ends in a consonant or a vowel. I haven't made the list of modifiers in the official factbook yet, though, because I'm not confident in my grasp of the terminology and mechanics of it all yet.

If I were to define it as a consistent application, it would be as such:

If the word's last consonant is "r", then the female suffix is "-ri". If the word's last consonant is not "r", then the female suffix is "-dri".

(And yes, I'm very glad I could get the links to work as well, though they were a pain to figure out, since to make them the same color I had to re-make the color and font tags for each new header and that added a good twenty minutes to the creation process since it took me a while to un-tangle the BBCode. I'm still not sure why fonts and colors don't carry over into URL tags, but they don't, for whatever reason.)

Thanks for asking! 🤖

The JR launched the first woman into space in 1966, and the SU tried to do the same in 1967, but there was an accident in which the capsule exploded. In August 1969, the JR landed the first humans on Luna, followed by the SU in October. The JR plans to return to the Moon in this decade.

The Kiu Ghesik are a clan-based nomadic society, not unlike pre-modern Mongols, Turks, and Berbers, who are currently in the technological equivalent of the late Bronze Age and inhabit a steppe region. Their religion is also akin to these aforementioned groups, revolving around a sky deity, although this time a Sky Mother rather than a Sky Father is the central figure, whose will is interpreted via the winds and clouds.

An ancient empire in the heart of Europa, born and forged in the fires of war, headed by an embittered Kaiserin and her ambitious generals. Surrounded on all sides by invaders and saboteurs, and having emerged victorious but scarred from a war to end all wars, the Fatherland stands on guard.

Set to go through a major rework. Timeskip, new factbooks, and map update included.

Their religion, while technically monotheistic in nature, believe that the winds are living beings that actively, though only minorly, shape the world around them. They could be compared to minor gods, such as river deities, and have traits loosely based on the actual quality of the wind itself (unless I misread it). Along with this, they actively practice a form of Aeromancy through the reading of cloud formations.

AN: Their world takes place after a German victory unites most of Europe under their influence or, in some cases, are directly annexed altogether. Despite being the sole superpower of the world, realistically the United States of Atlantia would only barely come close if that, it is increasingly militarized in order to beat back a potential threat from other nations.

Correct!

There's also a bit of deism and Chinese mythology thrown in there to balance out the Tengrism, in addition to some unique philosophy; Mummy Tengri is much more mechanical as a deity, Earth is not seen as a meeting ground between an upper and lower plane (i.e., no Tengri v. Eje dynamic), and the religion's view of humanity is far less steady—people live to die and only to die, and divine intervention is rare; what happens happens, we have no control over the broad scope of things, and nothing we build can ever last, as it is man's God-given role to die and fade away, just as all things in the lower sphere are meant to.

Also correct!

Though I would note that it's not magic—it's a very basic form of meteorology with mysticism heaped on top of it. You're completely correct on everything else, though.

Though the Sedentary Tribes are invariably more populous than the mobile tribes, the mobile tribes retain more influence per-capita by virtue of engaging in the more risky enterprises. This leads me to think that the Caleshans have a culture that puts more emphasis on risky, and perhaps instinctive, gambits; as opposed to the Godulans more methodic and cool-minded enterprises.
