To a degree, the Maoist CPC did not manage to take over China. Instead, Jingwei Wang -a left-aligned member of the KMT- took over the KMT and ensured the reunification of China as an uneasy ally of the Empire of Japan in a war against the West, which... huh. Not sure how that works with an independent Manchuria tbh.

I have learned that AN either uses USD, or another new currency titled the 'American Dollar'. If the first assumption is correct, it seems a little strange for a high hdi nation to not have its own currency, and if it's the latter, thats a little confusing.

(The "USD" exists ttl, but it isn't worth that much because of... reasons. Instead a "Dollar" exists which functions somewhat like the Euro does irl, and which we -among some 20 other North and South American countries use. I think I explained this in the currency segment of my overview) /skip

The military of the Caribbean Confederation is supplied by several foreign powers, such as the American Free States, the UK, Germany, Belgium and bizarrely, an independent Louisiana.

Edit: The UCBR's largest world is Atis. It was founded by the Rutzea, who fled their previous home on the planet Galax due to a violent invasive species bringing them almost to destruction.

the Airceltrian model is economically something I can best describe as "unionized state-capitalism", which is pretty cool, actually, despite its potential for abuse. there exists a strong social security net, but banks are significant players in industry, the state can nationalize at will and is an active player as well, and they've embraced what I can only call a mom-and-pop-shop military-industrial complex, since the military includes militias and supplies for all irregular forces look to be acquired from smaller weapons manufacturers.

I do have to say that "class collaboration" sounds a lot like "communism with Chinese characteristics", though.

Well one thing that I've learned about AN, and something that I think is kinda interesting is the Assembly of Free Unions. Apparently Anarcho-Syndicalism is still alive, even after almost a thousand years in the future. They even use the same red and black imaginary. I hope that they kick the scabs and the statistis and the jackboots out of Liam's Reach, because they are based as a truck.

While it was originally designed as what I'm assuming is a libertarian socialist world government, Zeloria quickly moved away from its roots, especially as technology advanced and Hyper-advanced AI became the norm in advisory positions in the government.

So, PATO, known as the Pan-American Treaty Organization, was formed originally as a defensive pact by the nations of the United States, the Confederate States, the Free States, Louisiana, Texas, Mexico, Brazil, Colombia, Caribbean, Argentina, Chile, Bolivia, Guatemala, Peru, Uruguay, Paraguay, Panama, Ecuador and Venezuela, and then it repurposed itself into a revival of the "Monroe Doctrine" which essentially made them eject colonial empires from the Americas, and they also kicked out Venezuela sometime later because of the Bolivarian Revolution.

With zero context the Fourth Reich maintains the same genocidal eugenics espoused by the Third Reich. However, according to the factbooks the targets of the genocidal eugenics programs are those (former) members of the Human race who've devolved into feral monstrous creatures that now pose a grave threat to their pure-blooded kindred. Regardless, those of the mutant strain who show signs of higher brain functions are granted citizenship and rights within the borders of the Fourth Reich.

Their constitution only requires that the High Council (in charge of the higher-level administration in their nation) includes a War Minister, Foreign Minister, Finance Minister, and 'Justics' (I'm assuming that's a typo of justice) Minister; with the Prime Minister being able to create or dissolve any other seats, subject to approval from Parliament.

I learned that ANs nation was occupied by Axis powers in the second world war, and temporarily integrated into Axis Occupied France. Their sovereignty was thankfully recovered after the war, as well as their monarchy being restored.
