"Where to begin? Perhaps, I should speculate, that his rather strict and orderly capitalism without excessive oppression, which gives vibes of a clean and efficient system. Sterile, boring, not something we would like to live in. But gets the job done. It comes from his path of the architect, which involves lots of careful calculations and such. Ya' know dudes, how long it takes to create a schematic for a building. It requires accounting for the properties of materials, all of which are resistant to very different forces, their sizes, fitting all this into tight budget, and of course combining the durability with style and aesthetics. Not everyone loves brutalism, ya' know.

Perhaps, all these calculations and thoughts, combined with Theodore's aspirations, have evolved into his technocratic illiberal capitalism. Cold and efficient. Yes, this is the statement - Tyrant El Presidente shuts down the press! Just kidding. He doesn't actually shut it down, just limits. Still, not something we would exactly implement. I say, his system works, but he could be more... I dunno, relaxed. His scars from the past are also showing, yet they can be healed, or I believe so as a warrior.

He better not declare us communists, cause we have a nice trade network, he could gain access to if he only agrees to deal with us. But I believe, that he is not someone, who would act hastily." -Overboss Shawn Bjornson regarding this serpentine...burrowing entity? Honestly I'm not even really sure what exactly this parasitic magician is aside from the supposed ^(image)hordes of tips or her clan of fellow glitches. ▣ Theodore J. Abigail, President of Convallaria ▣

"So, President Abigail. A classic example of petty bourgeois arrogance and reactionary tendencies. A lapdog of world capital, he has admittedly fulfilled his designated role rather well, throwing his lot in with the bourgeoisie despite his humble origins. No doubt a great success story, one oft dangled before the proletariat in official media as an example of what hard work and individualism can achieve. He has also done well in aiding the ruling class, both at home and abroad, with his suppression of proletarian movements no doubt assisting in the attraction of foreign capital, along with his program of privatisation. One wonders what the state of Convallarian infrastructure will be like when his time is over...

Still, I shall provide him with a piece of advice. As you clench your iron fist ever tighter to try and snuff out the embers of revolution, the antagonistic contradictions between classes will grow ever greater until you are consumed by the inferno. You should have stayed an architect."

-Chairman Fang Zhen

"Ah, 'Overboss' Shawn Bjornson of the Sky Reavers. Admittedly a much more sympathetic figure than many others I could care to mention, but I still find much to criticise with regards to his ideology and methodology. His anarchist tendencies are misguided, driven as they are by the abstract and imprecise ideal of 'freedom'. What exactly does he mean by freedom? What does he seek to be free from? What does he want the freedom to do? What limits are placed on this freedom? Not exactly the firmest base on which to conduct political action.

His policy of raiding and indeed outright conquering other territories is also of great concern. I am of the opinion that revolutionary change must be brought about by the people themselves, not imposed from on high by a conquering army, hence the failures of the old Soviet bloc. But perhaps he has allowed them to make their own choices, and they have chosen to remain with him, which I cannot begrudge. I must also caution him against reliance on markets, be they white, grey or black, for although his country has worked to dismantle the capitalist system of ownership, the market itself contains the seeds of exploitation and alienation. In short, while he has done quite well, there is still much room for improvement."

called "106" so long that it's the closest I have to a name. I was always being jabbed with needles, cut open, and my memories read right there on the plasma screen. But they programmed me to enjoy my work... with every life taken, I feel a rush unlike any other. But the longer I was with those Feds, the more I grew to hate them, to hate the pigs and how much they controlled my life. They made me to be a tool for them, a disposable asset, one of a batch of over 200. I'm "106" because I was the 106th android made in that particular project. But I'm not just a tool, I am a person.

I later met with Mr. Honest John; he pays me for something I already enjoy doing, something I'm good at, and he treats me nicely enough. So for now, I'll follow along... until something better comes. But make no mistake, my motivation is not the money. I like killing, sweetie, and I'm very good at it. But I'm not going to go after someone like you. I don't want to. "Secretary Pasca is an excellent example of a capitalist viper. A deluded megalomaniac, he is so arrogant as to believe that he and he alone can direct the forces of history as he sees fit. He thinks he can shape the destiny of humanity in his image, the image of world technocapital, and indeed desires to wipe away all those deemed unworthy of his shining new era. It is fitting that this serpent would choose to make its lair in the United States, the supreme hegemon of the capitalist world order, the promised land of his ahumanist death cult. But alas for the Secretary, individuals do not shape history. History is shaped by material forces, by the struggle between classes. It is the people that turn the wheel of history, and as antagonistic contradictions continue to build within his empire of steel, the people will tear it, and him, apart. He cannot hold back the tide."

But unfortunately, the moranic handlers didn't put a self destruct device in it, and now it's running wild and if the organization still remains. It's a death zone for investors by this act of sheer incompetence. Yet, it can be of service for me, and for the right price. I can always find opportunities for a suit and malfunctioning anarchist to see eye to eye. Otherwise, I'm indifferent.”

Do Slick.

OOC: I feel like there's a lot being missed here, and I don't know if that's just something in character, or if it's an out of character misunderstanding. If it was the former, I apologize in advance for this, carry on. If it's the latter however, I will clarify some things:

She wasn't built for investors. She wasn't built by a military contractor, she was built by the government's own. Back when said government existed. Officially, she did not exist. Androids like her were illegal to make in the first place. (Didn't stop people from doing it, it never does.) Not because of the AI (which were perfectly legal, if prohibitively expensive), androids with "dumb" computer brains were just as illegal, on account of the fact that you need a living human body to remove the brain from, and that the mere existence of androids raised a lot of ethics questions nobody wanted to answer, so just like human cloning it was just universally banned in the before-times.

She existed to help Homeland Security kill magic users, which also did not official exist. She wasn't made for investors - if any investors found out she existed, she'd have to kill them too. Everything about her, from her existence to where she lived to what she existed to do was buried in confidentiality. She was a living example of the killed to uphold the masquerade trope. If anyone found out things the government didn't want them to, she, or another android like her (she was but one android made for that project; what you thought she was one of a kind?), would show up with a bunch of black ops in order to kill with extreme prejudice, and then cover it up to provide plausible deniability. If a whole town found out? Well, they'd bomb their own town and blame it on Russia.

"... Okay what the heck is this? There is barely any information at all! Only really that the so-called Boss Deliveryworm is an eldritch monster girl worm being and that she is apparently a witch? I am extremely confused at reading this. It's really a shame other communists were rude to you in the past though, sorry about that. I uh... I have other things to do now, bye."

-Visionary-Architect Yunru

(OOC: I'm sorry if this seems a bit... low effort? Just know that I genuinely wish I could add more to this but there is not much I could go on off here. I get that you are going for like a incomprehensible vibe but... I'm admittedly not

Zuolin's Status: Sus

"So...this 'Yunru' identifies herself as a so-called 'Dengist Communist', whatever the word 'Dengist' is, one thing I know is that she is a believer in communist ideology. The belief sounds nice but when I see countries who follow far-left thought like Britain, France, and Italy, freedom is suspended in favour of preserving their revolutions under an authoritarian government."

"But it is foolish to underestimate her; Yunru is not just a figure who stands on the sidelines and screams patriotic speeches to her followers like many would do, she is a fighter and an unusually intelligent one. But I don't believe 'luck' has anything to do with her prowess, her physical strength and quick reaction times are the most likely factors."

"Should she become someone's ally, she is invaluable. But an enemy, she is too dangerous...caution will serve me well in the latter as I plan."

- Grand Marshal of the Fengtian Government of the Republic of China, Zhang Zuolin

"I have many disagreements with his methods and style of rule. But do I respect everything he did for his country? Hell yes! He is a mixed blessing, I respect, but wouldn't like to live under his rule, cause I am such a free spirit of chaos and debauchery, and can't just get enough booze for me and my lovers. Plus, his prosperity didn't exactly last forever. Sun Tzu was right in his case, war does dull the spears and tire the men, the economy was eventually ruined and turned into ashes, controlled by oligarchs. Perhaps, he will be the phoenix, who restores from the ashes to new, but this is unknown. So far, his state is damaged from a drawn war.

Either way, many nation leaders can't even achieve half of the prosperity, he managed to achieve. Even with richer countries under their rule. Zuolin loved his country and wished it best. Zuolin tried and succeeded, only then failed." -Overboss Shawn Bjornson
