Hell, this man has been through alot of conflict in his life. I'm surprised he's still considered... Oh it seems he's delved into some sort of science. How interesting, when I was in my prime science was feared, I never thought it would go so far as to creating life. Such a strange man, he fights for his beliefs which Is admirable."-The first king

So, am I looking at the wayback machine, or something? It seems, that he once used to be a human, and is a creature with generally bad omen. He has escaped Rapture, and now leads Low Bloods? Huh, once could wonder, what happened to that neko Oni - if reports from Rapture are right, he was slain. A pity, indeed...

His decision of weaponizing the beasts is either an insanity, or a genius move. I think, that it is the second, as his magical capabilities seem to be quite strong enough for him to control them, if things start slowly slippin' out of control. I understand, why you turned sky dark as well, but can you really last that long without sunlight to grow the crops?

Sadly, even with all that, there is little known about his political views. Is he one of those "enlightened centrists". which couldn't care less about politics? Fine, I might be a political pragmatist to an extent, but even I do have some strong views, when it comes to some things. What policies will he implement after the conflict ends?

What can I say? Gonna remain neutral in your's, and Rapture's conflict, as I have no interest of any of your CP tech paying a visit to Manchuria in form of weapons.

"It is only a veil, a barrier. An illusion, sun shines through, but it isn't projected as it is. Menacing and a natural defence.

Lowblood is in a state of tug of war, Rapture wishes to kill its culture for the "Betterment" of Lowblood, all while they steal from the land and nearly manage to awaken the ancient creatures imprisoned within the lands.

I'm here to show them that they shouldn't have interfered as Lowblood will always stay the same, or death will come.

Trying to change it will not only cause death for Lowblood, but also for Rapture. This will be a hard lesson learned.

This is my second time I am in possession of my own soul, it has been centuries of idle observation. All those that held my soul I have the power of them and the battles they won. So thank you for your compliments of my magic.

As for science, Lowblood decided that would be good to delve into when the first knight was gunned down by bullets, now that was a long time ago.

As for policies, after this is over some will be made. But I'll just say that I was the one that made the foundation of Lowblood, it's system was formed by me, improved as time went.

Rapture isn't the only kind trying to capitalize on us as many have in the past, they surely won't be the last.

"A warlord and former self-proclaimed monarch turned into a President-Governor... that is one strange, and somewhat questionable career. At least he has some merit, even if it is based on brute force and violence. He is a strongman, but seems largely self-serving. What surprises me the most is his lack of ideological definition and commitment, being largely and dangerously undefined in many issues. What kind of leader creates a strong state to then submit to 'too strong pressure' from chaotic subversives?"

man is to live his life, though a stance against religion indicates he must have a rather cynical outlook on life, which makes me wonder what his definition of the meaning of life is. For me, it is to bring peace to one's self in order to unlock their true potential. And it's no special power, anybody is able to harness it, though one must be careful, because when such power falls into the wrong hands, this entire world could be in danger. For Stanislav, his paranoia causing him to implant chips and crack down on dissidents is a method of keeping his leadership in check, but for I, it is a necessity. Though his people may live in fear, I wish them a happy life, and to Stanislav too, despite his otherwise dystopian state."

"Destroyin' the nation ain't necessary to win the war, huh? I have an impression, that he at least heard of ol' Sun Tzu, as he wrote in The Art of War, that on the first place is to preserve, and to destroy is on the second. Either way, how the heck can I dislike a disciplined and wise literal demigod with a nuclear punch? He is awesome! Even though, I would chafe under all that discipline of his lifestyle. Besides, unlike him, I tend to judge other leaders from prism of our ideology... much like most Skyhookers do. But, we have lots to learn from eachother.

For example, I can show him my own combat style, which relies on chaos rather than order. It's about trusting one's intuition and making highly unpredictable moves, that break opponent's rhythm and thus renders his reaction time and concentration partially useless, as most attacks can't be predicted. It also allows to think about other things, as it's mostly about subconscious decisions, which are much faster to take. While he can show me, how to clear head from distracting thoughts and analyze the situation, all while being in a semi-meditative state. Too bad, that unlike him, I don't possess elemental powers, I just a mere peak-human after all...

But maybe that's for better. Who knows, maybe nuclear bomb power punch and ability to control all elements would corrupt me...

Perhaps, one day, I will visit his monastery."-Shawn Bjornson

Goddamn, it's early. Perhaps too early to be posting about leaders. Ah well. I'm here on my phone and work doesn't start up a few hours as the State understands the importance of a well-rested worker before they behind a desk and slave patriotically with an endless mountain of paperwork, and a drinking an unhealthy amount of coffee to keep from falling sleep out of utter boredom. Man, I wish the weekend was here faster, I wanna last have fun and not be here, at all. Errr, enough about me and my first world problems. I wish was born in a country like his, perhaps, not as libertarian as he is, but able enough that I don't feel like someone's always watching me. I don't expect me to follow the law and be a good citizen. Yeah, I know I'm not. Otherwise, sorry for this messy post. It's still early in the morning and I haven't had breakfast yet. - In the underwater city, two roles have emerged from the City's ongoing civil war: the City Monitors who defend the peace and the Red Caps who fight against unjust systems. The city's infrastructure is crumbling under its own weight and kinship is snuffed by the paranoia of totalitarianism. All I do know is that son of John must love you. That man lurks just along the same works as you. Always seeming on ones side but always looking for a higher gain.

Such corruption, I can't say Lowblood lacked it. But atleast it was in our shadow, not displayed so upfront but hidden.

Yes, looking at the lower classes and suddenly becoming the most righteous of individuals from the upper classes, what a joke. You honestly believe looking at some shantytowns will make you a better person instantly? Let's be real here. It won't, as you can recognize it but in the end, you can be a selfish bastard like Andrew Mercer and do nothing at all to get those people climbing the ladder to success unless you can make a profit with allegedly helping the poor. I'm not trying to say, you can't help without being a greedy bastard. I'm just trying to say that I find it difficult for someone to suddenly have the desire to help their lessers. But maybe, I shouldn't really comment on this. I'm from Rapture after all, and everyone knows how we are. Otherwise, there's not much else to say about this Lucky Wells character, besides his picture being uncomfortable to look at.

Rapture City

- In the underwater city, two roles have emerged from the City's ongoing civil war: the City Monitors who defend the peace and the Red Caps who fight against unjust systems. The city's infrastructure is crumbling under its own weight and kinship is snuffed by the paranoia of totalitarianism. Yet the people would be in for a surprise as their virtual overlord have died many years ago as the oppression continues under his name...
- Not an 1-1 exact replica of Bioshock lore and Rapture City. Only the city's atmosphere and setting is maintained.

Oooh, the Emperor! You are that guest from the party that we had back in 2043! It's been a loooong while, haha! Well, well, I will have to say that I am a little wary around you, to be honest. I mean, the way you seem to be a warring person, as well as being a little hostile to people around? Neutral with a fascist, those that I am uncomfortable talking to. Hmm, it's a tough sell! Still, I will try my very, very best to be positive, or slightly positive, whatever I can do!
