Dr. Chisana Akagi's opinion on The Emperor of Greater Victoria

Hello, it's me again! This time I have the dossier on... The Lord Emperor of the Victoran Empire?

Well, he certainly looks the part of a Lord Emperor. I like the armour very much. He has a long history too, a very interesting read. Personality-wise, he seems like a great dude, placing himself before others, very admirable! Well, he does seem like a bit of a dick, with how condescending he can be, but everyone can be like that sometimes. Ooh, he seems pretty strong... I'd actually like to spar with him. Overall, we seem to lead the same way too. I think we could be friends!

"Like I give a shit about how strong or armored he thinks he is... He is just some glorified bandito with fancy armor, that would make a nice trophy should we defeat him and his goons. And we should do something like that, cuz otherwise, there is no telling, how many innocents this cabron gonna kill for his own gains or just for fun. But enough about our opposition, cuz it's no surprise, that we believe, that he must be put down for the sake of the people!"

I'd rather comment on his style of fight. It's somewhat opposite, for we prefer mobility and speed to armor. Cunning and speedy maneuvers are more important on the battlefield or during a duel, I believe. If I was to fight him, I'd use his preferences against him. Too much armor limits one's mobility, and if not, a prolonged fighting might exhaust him faster. Besides, it's rather bulky. His weapon is truly dangerous, but also has disadvantages, that might prove fatal. It's harder to direct and control flail than a blade. This can be exploited through a series of dodges and provocations. Not to mention, his helmet would probably limit his peripheral vision, making it easier to get out of his line of sight.

Either way, if he enters a portal and tries to raid our resort... Oh, then our paradise gonna become a hell for him. After the revolution, we have created strong communal defenses and will no longer allow any bandit warlord, tyrant or some other bastard to kill and oppress us!" -Overboss Liam Navarro

Alas while I do admit to lighting up on national holidays, as is pretty standard in the Huterric Union, I don't think chuffing ziggies on the daily when you're a leader is a good look. Where I do find myself agreeing with Liam Navarro I don't find myself applauding him for his takes, the ones I have seen so far are opinions I would sincerely hope he'd have...especially when he says he disagrees with nazism and racism and slavery. Those are not hot takes, if anything they're takes from the freezer. The fact he was able to beat his predecessor in a fight despite being weaker, however, is impressive, as is his knowledge of weapons. I'd hire him as part of the military if he weren't so informal - our military requires a certain degree of discipline and formality and I absolutely wouldn't want someone as informal as him having some working knowledge of our nukes.

After a little discussion with my vice president, we very much think you'd fit in better as someone living in southeast Huterrica than as a leader of a nation, however we have no issue with you as a person and should he end up on the Union's soil we very much hope he finds the cannabis here to be exquisite." - President Loreta Martin

I would favor a more conservative society in my country, and, I've said this before, I oppose a lot of things she supports. This doesn't mean I oppose everything about her. In fact, some of the stuff she has done is actually pretty beneficial. She passed public health reforms, spend a considerable amount of money on improving infrastructure, and her response to the Great Natari Earthquake seemed to be pretty beneficial. Her requiring of new homes be built with solar panels is also pretty approvable. She also follows her own economic brand of nationalism and prioritizes national services, which is very good. Overall, despite disagreeing with her on many things, many of her actions have proven to be very beneficial to her country. I support that, and I do support these actions."

Dr. Chimi Akagi's thoughts on Waldemar Rochester

He looks like a nice guy and from what I've read - he is. A skilled military commander who overthrew an oppressive regime and instated democracy in his country, as well as an advocate for non-human rights. Her rabbit ears twitch a little. Even though he apparently doesn't have much political experience... eh, actually, I'm not sure I have the right to discuss that - I'm a researcher forced to be a leader... Anyway, he definitely seems like a nice dude and from our past interaction, that really shows. I can't say I'm fond of his anti-Communist stance, or his militarism, but that doesn't detract from my opinion of him.

I have always been one to steer clear of taback<sup>[2]</sup>, but I may need to light a cigaret<sup>[3]</sup> after the headache this is bound to bring.

Lady Frasch is the ruler of what seems to be a small ieland<sup>[4]</sup> called “Oktotheio” in the Aegaeish Ielands<sup>[5]</sup> with—and I am not making this up—some 38 million folk living on it, which is more than the whole of Greekland<sup>[6]</sup>. How one would squeeze all those men, women, and children in such a cramped room<sup>[7]</sup> is beyond me, but that is not my business here.

If Churchill says Russland<sup>[8]</sup> is “a riddle”, then I think I may have found an even more bewildering riddle than that wide snowy wasteland with Oktotheio and its ruler. She seems to have forbidden clothing—how these folk live through winter without dying of frostbite, I do not know—as well as the deed of knowing<sup>9</sup>; if you know what I mean, one's husband or wife outside of, not in, the openly<sup>[9]</sup> eye. And, in the peak of her madness, she began calling herself a “goddine<sup>[10]</sup>”, and craved<sup>[11]</sup> the folk of her ieland worship her as such.

I have little in the way of words to bewrite<sup>[12]</sup> this woman, so I will keep this short. She is a madwoman, in her hubris bringing her folk down in such backwards barbarism, of the kind her Greekish<sup>[13]</sup> forefathers—for byspel<sup>[14]</sup>, Socrates, known fondler of young boys, and Diogenes, a wild ape in the shape of a man—would be proud of. I find it hard to believe that any man, or woman as with Lady Frasch, could lose his mind in a way such as this. Dzhugashvili†, he may be called a madman, but at least I understand why he is the way he is. This woman, on the other hand, is well beyond any sort of grounded thought.

I think I shall ask for a glass of whisky from the English as well.

That is all.

Sitz, defacto leader of expeditionary team "Kite Flyers"

So what do we have here? General Günther von Bromberg. You're a general of an old human army back in the early 20th century. Its a period of Earth history that is pretty widely talked about here on my Earth. But if I further look in your bio, it seems like that your world has a different history then mine.

You're a nobleman who became part of the general staff because of the connections your father has. But then you did something stupid and made a general mad. Because of that, you had to fight on the actual frontline in one of the more gruesome parts of the war. You were promoted a few times. I also served in a war, but not as a conscript. The Sitrimmian Collective doesn't have conscription. Instead I served as a reluctant volunteer, because I felt like I had to do something.

In the interwar era, Germany had a civil war, which reads more like a small uprising in this bio. Not that your Germany really stayed out of war. Because not long after that, you got into conflict with the French. You managed to trap a lot of French soldiers, but then you got a "no quarter" order. Many of these troops were killed. Why were you given this order? Did these troops surrender or not? Was this purely a revenge action? So many questions.

You then were stationed on the other side of the continent to fight the Russians. But that ended when atomic bombs were used. Both sides were too terrified to continue after seeing what kind of destruction it could bring. I wish that the same could have happened during the Multiverse War, but alas. Nukes there were sometimes thrown around like they were candy.

After the war was over, you led the occupation of the city of Paris. But during your term, food was cut off from the population because according to one general, "It was a waste of good food and other supplies." What is wrong with that guy?! Because of him, innocent civilians died. This is not how you win favor with the local populace. He also became the occupational leader after you?! Well, it certainly wasn't a good time to be a Parisian.

The final things I have to say is that from the section about your personal life, I've learned that while you are an asshole, you are at least better than the rest of the German General Staff. This explains a lot. That's all. See you around Boomborg.

Its 2027, almost twenty years ago, a storage-facility with mysterious machines was found on the moon. These machines seemed to have the ability to open portals to other dimensions. In response to this, the United Nations created the UNEEU, or United Nations Extra-Universal Exploration Unit to see what the multiverse has for them, exposing Earth to many opportunities and dangers.

E-er... What are you? No offence. Anyway... I can see you're pretty smart, huh? That's awesome! Not many people value that these days. A multiverse traveller too, like me, that's neat. It's a shame your planet got glassed by WMDs - Okinawa got hit hard by a nuclear apocalypse too. You're very brave, leading the charge against these "First Hegemony" folks. I'm sure the Multiverse thanks you... Although if they ever came here, we'd kick their asses. I'm sending you some Crimson tech through quantum entanglement as a gift!

"Now, my current though is about cooperating with her. We got several projects, for which we could use her expertise and experience. For example, Emergency Subterranean Towns, where we could house major amounts of populations in case of most dire emergencies. This could be also useful for military production. Dispersed underground complexes, which could produce weapons without being afraid of missile strikes and air raids. Yeah, it'll be expensive as hell... That's why we need more data on similar projects. I don't know, how much she is gonna ask in exchange for this kind of data, but I ma damn shure, that it'll be far, far cheaper than fully conducting such researches by ourselves. Also, while our communes and cities are also able to self-sustain, so attacks on centralized infrastructure will not collapse us, her data on self-sustaining acrologies could help us to improve this, for there is always a room for improvement.

Either way, my opinion on her is somewhat positive and I think, that cooperation with Akagi would help us to build up better defenses and thus, make our country less vulnerable to attacks. I know, that she might not approve our militarism, but for us... Long ago, we have been attacked once by a mercenary force and were defenseless, and this resulted in destruction of our culture, genocide and enslavement of our people for 25 years. So it's no wonder, than now, we want to ensure, that never again we will be conquered."-Overboss Liam Navarro

Let's see... Oh boy, a militarist... I guess a good fight can't hurt, but wars are unnecessary - I hope you aren't a warmonger. In all fairness you do seem very competent and charismatic but, eh, I'm not fond on the attitude. Huh, getting rid of supremacists was a neat thing to do, I commend that... but do we have to execute everyone? Jeez.

Oh... I think she's not a leader from Terra Nova... So why's she in their dossier? Sigh. Oh well.

She was the leader of Andiposia during the 3rd Andiposian War, which was particularly scarring for the people of Nova and Andiposia alike. So, a pretty big deal.

[1] Heyang refers to a people of unclear ethnic origins but is theorized to refer to nomadic groups who settled adjacent to the Late Daschime Culture and later defeated in a hypothetical war. It later began to refer to foreign peoples, "savages" and "Barbarians" in Feyris language.

[2] Due to Lian's physical appearance it is possible that Ryeischbyi thought he was one of the Heyang. The "Heyang" are frequently referred to as hairy and bearded in Daschime oral tradition and ethnography.

[3] Not a misspelling, but a wonky translation of a Feyris gender-neutral pronoun

[4] "Fyudifur" refers to a vague Feyris concept, it can be taken to refer to kindness, empathy, sympathy and morality

[5] "cheibubyur" is the word here, which means four-legged beasts of burden. This metaphor is hard to understand, it might mean comparing warriors to animals?

[6] "Boschiren" means "people, nation, country, realm"

[6] "Seybenhann" refers to a semi-professional retinue group of warriors (a warrior lodge) that Chieftess Ryeischbyi established in her reign

BN: As Chieftess Ryeischbyi still has no Factbook, react to High Princess Ryeisse Schyi Yuri instead.

Surprisingly enough comrade Yuri is not as bad as she seems on first sight. She has a lot of fighting spirit and stands for order and renewal. She is of course weak as she is heavily infected by western degeneracy. I have serious doubt that she will stand up to her rhetoric and show the strength, recklessness and resourcefulness of her idols. She obviously lacks their pride and discipline and she is heavily affected by what people think of her which makes her very weak and depending. We would send military help if she stands up to her words and purges the nation but she would be the first to move away from western degeneracy.
