Does that mean you're not going to post in this thread again? Because it would be good if you didn't post in this thread again. You can control what happens to your nation. You have no power over other players. Attempts to do so are extremely annoying. Stop.

We don't actually enforce RP rules ... or lack of rules in this case.

When the universe was reset to the second one, the high energy weapons testing and field testing would manage to get European Empire space fleet and everyone working on it to the other universe (fancy space science or something). They'd suddenly appear in a white flash in the same location in the new universe in the area of sweden they were building the fleet. Realising they were in another universe they'd set up their proto shielding tech around the site and continue building the fleet.

With europe free from mongol rule the space fleet project would begin to make secret deals with the various new governments in order to get the resources to finish the fleet, they'd give away blueprints to various weaponry to the governments they made deals with.

OOC: The only reason I gave it is that the ships were old, and my Republic needed money to make new ones.

The Lunar Republic delivers the ships to an European island in the Atlantic. Two new ships, the KMS Revolution and KMS Orbit are being made.
