Listening to this one now. For whatever reason, back when I listened to Sigur Ros a LOT, I didn't get this song when my dad Cough illegally downloaded that album Cough, so I didn't find it until like a year later. But it is probably one of my favorites.

I remember downloading it -and other parts of the album- in 2002 as some non-descript "icelandic music" (labeling in those days) Ended up buying the album as well as Von and (). Now I have a whole bunch of Amina and Mum. I can honestly say it was the first of a few that led me to venture outside of pop music.

For Sigur Ros, I own their documentary, the album Valtari, and the live album Inni. I plan to get others in the future. Right now, I'll just legally listen to it on Spotify.

Sigur Ros is what got me to explore the great Icelandic music scene. Amiina and Mum being 2 examples. Then there is Bjork, Olafur Arnalds, Johann Johannsson, Agent Fresco, and so on. Iceland has a great music scene for such a small country.
