@Wuchu "Wow, you are a Hipster. I am surprised your kind survived the apocalypse. Kotera, you are what the rest of the world calls a 'nerd.'"

But you know what? I still respect you. We may have our disagreements, I think you're a hipster, you might think I am a "red fascist". However, both of our worlds have dark shadows looming over them. The shadow of fascism looms over my lands, threatening to bomb my people and destroy everything they hold dear. Your world is already mostly destroyed, with warlords and pseudo-states picking the dead remains of former nations. While our threats are certainly different, I can see why many people would be distraught at their current situations. It's nice to see someone fighting against just that. You may be a bit of a nerd, with your philosophy and writings, but you seem to be a decent person. Something I can't say for quite a few humans, including myself - really. You may be odd, but I can still support your cause when compared to the other causes around you. Best of luck, if you even believe in that."

AN: "Ugh, well aren't you kind of disgusting? Like, I already can't respect anyone who gives themselves the mantle of 'Supreme Leader', but you? You love fascism and dictatorships! Governments known to be grossly inefficient at best. You stand for a lot of things I despise, corruption, authoritarianism, silencing dissidents, conservatism, and a whole bunch of things I can't respect. And before you say it, yes, you are corrupt. Throwing people in jail because they're "politically dangerous" is corruption knowing your kind, because that includes anyone who disagrees with your government. At least you like minorities, but you might as well not like them given how little you've done to care about them. Bleagh, I hope you get removed one day."

"What a miserable life Mr Devin has, being in a "free" country that in reality is ruled by oligarchs and being unable to rule at all. I actually feel bad for him as he isn't able to actually do what he wants and needs to do as leader, everything he does is always modified by someone until it's useless. But apart from that holy shit man, your might wanna calm down on your interventionism, I mean enforcing freedom is one thing but capitalism is something else, your entire nation looks like it needs a cultural revolution and actually makes Maoist china not sound like not such a bad place anymore. You got the liberal part right, now we need to purge the government from the bourgeoisie. Lastly, I see you have tasted the true meaning of war, overthrowing dictators is nice but war isn't great, at least you learned your lesson. Overall i've seen worse leaders."

"I feel the darkness that surrounds this man. He has a great mind and a strong will, yet he is quick to use both in situations where it is sometimes unneeded. He defiles his own body to improve himself yet either does not consider the cost or is indifferent to it. He is not an evil man, yet evil lurks in his shadow and if he is not cautious it shall overtake him. I lament that the raving fanaticism of misguided infidels has polluted his view of faith. Temporal knowledge can gift one with the power to grasp that which can be understood but there exist concepts outside this purview that require eyes which can see beyond the physical."

"I have met men like this one before. He is a marauding nomadic barbarian warlord. But unlike most he is not driven by mere survival, tradition, or even faith. His pillaging is motivated by an almost zealous obsession with spreading chaos itself, which he refers to as 'freedom'. This misplaced passion for aimless hedonism and debauchery disguised as a move for individual independence is a truly insidious motive. He would tear down governments and states simply because he personally believes they are 'corrupt' or 'tyrannical' yet apparently does not bother to ask the people he is supposedly liberating if they desire to be liberated. Warlords like him might excel at conquest, but the consolidation of his conquered territories is something beyond his ability. His empire is held together by his charisma and monopoly on force alone. Should he die and his successor lack the same qualities, his empire will collapse overnight for it is clear that he has not invested enough into it so as to ensure that it will outlast him. His dullness and short-sighted nature are undoubtedly his greatest flaws, and it is only a matter of time before a scheming opportunist removes him from the picture to seize control of all he's built - as is typical for such lawless and disorganized societies."

Maybe they are stronger in some ways, but it's unlikely, that Von Stein's darwinist paradise gonna last long. Once his empire tries to swallow something too big, or maybe gets into trouble, it's people will turn on each other out of paranoia and greed, and tear this empire apart for good. Besides, for some reasons, they don't like, when their asses get smacked by non-darwinists, despite the fact, that this was "natural selection" and non-darwinists proved to be stronger. From the Imperial Palace.

My personal thoughts regarding the Grand Overseer named Viktor Von Stein

"An empire that is led by leaders like Viktor Von Stein, who is guided by a godless view of the world and uses the veneer of social darwinism to justify the means to achieve his objectives, is an empire constantly beset by endless struggle forever. Truly I say it has been frustrating for the longest time to know there are those who will side with this person; he is a servant to that tyrant he calls an emperor, sent to eliminate any and all enemies to preserve his lordship. And after observing his backstory, I can rightly say that he is less of a leader at the moment and more of a weapon his lord can summon when there is opposition in his empire too great to deal with through force."
