Three F7 clichés:

1. What does AN mean??? Does anyone know??

2. (Kind of relating to the above one) People who post in a thread where you guess something about the AN (like how they deal with traitors, languages they speak, their religion, etc.) and instead post the answer for their nation because they don't understand how the thread works.

3. People who will quote and reply to a post from like 50+ pages ago in a thread. Extra bonus points if they quote and reply to the fucking OP or something.

Well, I saw one user who thought that to avoid "insufficient OP" meant "sticking to the thread they have opened because otherwise rogue moderators close it".

Kinda a complement to 2 and 3, so here it is!

4. Replying to a F&NI thread that has either been long over, or the index-making OP is long CTE.

I will legit never understand the mindset of players who decide to reply to a thread from like 20-goddamn-10. Like deadass just make a new thread if it's more than six months old IMO, it's not we'll run out of storage space for posts any time soon. Constantly posting after every two posts. It makes it look like they're trying to skirt around doubleposting and, imo, it comes off as just really arrogant for some reason.

Don't set yourself a hard limit. Just set a minimum of 3-4 posts between your own posts, and you're golden.

I'm probably the only person who doesn't give a shit if someone replies to someone who replied to them tbh.

I only care if they repeatedly do it and don't give anyone else a chance to respond.

Also doubleposting is posting two direct posts in a row, not replying after someone replied to you. I will not budge from this. This is the definition used on literally every other forum and even here until some people in F7 decided to change the definition for no reason

Eh. Not for no reason. Doubleposting in a lot of F7 threads became a thing because of the unique nature of some threads.

That would also explain why someone got confused when I told them I got double-posted. F7 just has weird or "special" terms.

tbf this even happens to mods too; i've seen people told off by mods for bumping f7 threads because it's not a tolerable practice elsewhere, and usually even the mod expresses confusion when they're told that it's accepted practice in f7.

Or just use wacky irl ideas and crank it to 11.

Make guy sneak in embassy in dog outfit so he could sniff children's hair so he could be charged with sexual harassment so he could get in prison to wiretap a warden then get out of prison in riot in which you use face mask and prison guard cloths to pass a patrol so you can be picked up in a hot air balloon so you can consume dead rat to read the debriefing of your operation while you vomit from the excess Tabasco that was in the rat, after which you realized the agency betrayed you and you have to take off your glasses to bite the frame to consume cynide to die before you get summarily executed by your handlers SOE style.

Alt. of Hamatu

Late Medieval (Set 1239 CE). A Byzantine Successor State. Maybe Magical, Maybe Not. Has Some Indigenous Anatolian Influences Technically Religiously Syncretic (Byzantine Orthodox Saints - Ancient Anatolian Deities). Not Crusaders (Again, Not Crusaders). But Definitely Character-Oriented (Lord Trokondas/Princess Euphrosyne/Lady Bassaine)
