So, embezzlement? That would land you a considerable amount of time in prison, and may involve you having to repay the amount that you stole.

Placing a car bomb in your leader's vehicle?

Stand Your Ground laws necessitate that it be punished only with a fine and at most two months of prison in all but 2 of the states.

Killing someone in self-defense who has attacked you inside your home, but with a disproportionate weapon (he had a spear, you had a gatling gun, for example)

Not a crime in and of itself, but homophobic acts of hate speech, depending on who commits them, can be punished by fines, community service, a few months in prison and in the most radical case seizure of the culprit's assets (i.e. if a bakery refuses to sell cakes, their bakery is sold off with the money paid to recompense the victims).

Embezzlement?

Doxxing people for minor reasons

If they live alone: getting doxed (eye for an eye)

If they don't: five years in prison (based on the idea that doxing them could endanger innocents).
