Nope. Just did, though, and that's pretty much exactly what I meant though his singing bothered me less then in the other song I heard. Like, where I can't really dislike it because he seems creative and musically interesting but I can't get into his singing at times. Though in that song I didn't really mind it. The song I heard which I think was from Dead Rising 2 sounds way different but something about it was still interesting.

I actually have an electronic album of his sitting around that I need to go through at some point, that has some Dubstep stuff on it that I found to actually be interesting.

So yeah, honestly, I might have to give Celldweller a chance at some point because something about it keeps me interested.

He seems to vary widely from the brief listening of him I've done.

In fact the genres listed are:

Electronic rock
Alternative metal
Industrial metal
Trance
Crossover
Ambient
Nu metal
Drum & Bass
Dubstep

I just looked through all the albums and I don't see any fully metal albums, though.
