This 'Hopes-For-Sunset'... she's one of those 'extraterrestrials' I've been hearing all about, beings not from this world. Since that is the case, I intend to exercise great caution when it comes to receiving 'certain visitors' from another world. Besides that, I do suppose she is quiet competent for a lawyer - and a non-human kind of lawyer at that - who is ready to defend her clients in the court of justice. I believe that is all I have to say for tonight."

General Barro. The frail mirror to Mawar's self. A man who could have ruled the world, but was held back so dearly. Unlike Mawar however, his age caught up to him along with his policy. So shrewd, so conservative! Rather than seek to grab the ram by the horns and attempt to push around others, he simply resorts to baiting communists into traps so he can get a kick out of hanging them! Peh! He should learn to fight a real man's war, instead of this petty little business of bullying commies. In fact, he hasn't even resorted to pushing his own ideas onto his country either! But somehow, it's not an anarchy at all. A bit ironic, almost.

"Alright Greg, who've we got now? Two files to choose from? Eh, I'll do both. Just give me a sec to read through them..

First up, Miss Akio Suzuki. Miss Suzuki is quite the figure. I've got alot of sympathy for her, and I'm thankful that the people here in Tremulo don't have to deal with the problems she's faced, even with the Militia trying their best. We have our similarities, mostly in policy, we have our differences, mostly in ideology. But, I can safely say I think we'd get along quite nicely.

Next is Kako Kasei. Kako, from what I've read here, has gone through hell. And yet, after all the trauma that's haunted her life, she tries her best to be a beacon to those around her. With all the discomfort she suffers, all the trauma and misery, Kako is still trying to help those around her and brighten the world. She's more human than anyone I've read about in these files yet, and I admire her deeply."

"Yo, I loved playing Oracle of Ages! Or was it Seasons? I don't exactly remember which I played. It was a long time ago, and I was like, four. Still not sure how I got through the game when I was so little... Heh, anyway. I guess that means you're evil, right? Which is too bad! A knight with a ball and chain and the ability to transform into a dragon? Man, you're so cool! Ooh, oh, oh, they should totally add you to Smash Bros! Just picture it, your Final Smash could be turning into your dragon form!"

"Ugh, what a crass brute. General Onox may style himself a gentleman, and he may have stumbled on some of the preliminaries of Rand's righteous philosophy of self-interest, but the General's whole is less than the sum of his parts. That he transforms into a dragon is all too poignant. Underneath that knightly veneer, Onox is not really a man, but a mere beast."
